Laval Is Voted Broad Power By Chamber In Gold Crisis

New Cabinet Is Upheld by Wide Margin in Initial Tests.

Situation Serious, Premier Asserts

Will Have Right to Rule by Decree in Drive to Save Franc.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, (Saturday), June 8.—Where two governments toppled before him, Premier Pierre Laval won from the Chamber of Deputies early today emergency financial powers.

The new premier — the third to face the chamber in eight days—wrung decree powers from the chamber to fight off the franc's devaluation by a vote of confidence of 324 to 168.

In an earlier test, the first for his newly formed cabinet, the premier had won another overwhelming vote of confidence, the deputies voting 412 to 137 in his favor on the technical point of postponing all interpellations.

"The situation is serious," Laval told the chamber in demanding his emergency powers. "The outflow of gold diminished last week but did not cease.

"The budget deficit with the railroad deficit will reach 10,000,000,000 francs this year and the treasury will have to meet a payment of 2,000,000,000."

He promisid to defend the parliamentary regime as a "Republican institution."

Recovery Is Goal.

Governments headed by Pierre-Etienne Flandin and Fernando Bouisson fell in the chamber on the issue of the financial dictatorship they declared was necessary if the fight to save the franc was to succeed.

The 52-year-old veteran of the foreign office, wearing his customary white tie, told the chamber the government's financial troubles were the only threat to the franc's solidity.

Business recovery, he declared, is the new government's real aim in the hope that it will restore national financial stability and help balance the budget.

Immediately after the vote of confidence the government's decree powers bill was sent to the chamber finance committee for quick consideration. Prevention of devaluation was given as the sole object in the law, under which Parliament would authorize Laval's ministry to take "any measures" up to October 31 "to fight against speculation and defend the franc."

Decrees issued would be submitted to Parliament for ratification before January 1, 1936.

Laval, who had been 36 hours without sleep while he negotiated with political leaders to form his government, read his ministerial declaration to an unenthusiastic chamber, declaring the powers he asked "necessary."

A bitter attack by the Socialist deputy Lagrange, who charged the Bank of France "worked with the government in the campaign of panic" to enforce the bank's exaction that the cabinet be accorded full powers," preceded the first vote of confidence.

"Our government was formed to fight against speculation and to defend the franc," Laval said in his ministerial declaration.

"In answering the chief of state's appeal we did our duty. We must now have the means of action. Parliament will give them to us by immediately voting the bill which we are introducing."

First Indictment.

Asserting "the condition of the public finances is the sole menace to the franc," Laval continued

"Reduction of expenditures and suppression of abuses is not enough. We must tackle the problem of business restoration. That is our real objective."

Despite his plea, the Chamber Finance Committee approved the bill by only 19 to 14. Bouisson got the same sort of backing June 4 when the committee voted 19 to 18.

Meanwhile the first indictment was returned in the government's drive to smash speculators. Georges Bodenheimer, head of the prominent Paris brokerage house bearing his name, was charged with "attacking the credit of the state" in issuing circular letters advising his clients to purchase gold.

The Chamber's finance committee voted a motion for an inquiry into "all activities which have provoked organized campaigns against the public credit and free play of the republic's institutions."

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 7.—A sharp recovery in French francs during late dealings here featured foreign exchange markets today. The French unit bounded up to within close proximity of its parity of 6.63 cents. Both sterling and dollars were in retreat.

Beginning at 6.61½ cents, the franc worked gradually higher as news from Paris indicated less tension in finance and politics as a result of the formation of a new government. At the closing rate of 6.62¼ cents, it was .02¼ of a cent higher than on Thursday. The dollar had ended in Paris several hours earlier at 6.6192 cents to the franc.

Chinese Yield Again to Japan As Arms Flash

War Display Wrings More Concessions Below the Great Wall.

The Chinese Situation.

Japan rushed more troops into the troubled north China area, below the Great Wall.

Additional Japanese troops were embarking for China from island ports.

Tientsin, June 8 (Saturday).—Japan rushed more troops into the north China trouble zone below the Great Wall today, additional units sailing on transports from Japanese ports for Tientsin.

Japanese troops paraded through the Chinese native areas of Tientsin, provincial capital and center of the latest disturbance in which Tokyo threatens to take "decisive action" to quell alleged anti-Japanese terrorism.

In full war equipment, the Japanese soldiers practiced with machine-gun units in many sections of the Chinese city, outside the foreign-controlled concessions, in which most Americans, British and others reside.

Lieut. Gen. Yoshijiro Umezu, commandant of the Japanese forces, said that transports bringing reinforcements to his garrison, leaving home ports today, would reach Tientsin on June 12.

This probably accounts for rumors that the Japanese intend to take action on that date, although there so far has been no official confirmation. Japanese officials insisted no time-limit or ultimatum had been given the Chinese on their latest demands, dispatched from Tokyo.

Gen. Umezu declined to specify the number of fresh troops arriving next week. He said they would be used as reinforcements for the present, rather than replacements, as originally scheduled, and would be kept here until the situation is quiet.

The "council of war" of Japanese officers in the north China area has reached no decision as yet, he added, and action will be delayed pending the arrival of Maj. Gen. Tetsuzan Nagata, head of the military affairs bureau, from Tokyo.

Roosevelt Greets Vanguard Of Shriners at White House

President Welcomes Leaders as Member of Order While Preparations for Imperial Conclave Move Toward Completion.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, acting in his capacity both as President of the United States and as a member of Cyprus Temple, greeted the Shriners' vanguard yesterday as preparations for their imperial conclave moved toward completion in feverish steps.

While the President was trying on his fez in the White House, sound mechanics were finishing installation of Pennsylvania avenue's $50,000 amplification system, delegates were arriving by every train, new traffic regulations were being announced and Washington's public was falling into the spirit of the riotous celebration which is to come next week.

Called to order by W. Freeland Kendrick, chairman, the board of trustees of the Shrine Hospitals for Crippled Children, opened its semiannual meeting at the Willard Hotel. The session will be continued today and Monday and resumed at the close of the imperial council meeting Thursday.

White House Receives Wait.

Among yesterday's arrivals was James M. Watt, past potentate of Cyprus, the President's temple at Albany, N. Y. He was in the group received at the White House. Another of the early comers was James S. McCandless, who was imperial potentate when the Shriners last held their convention in Washington 12 years ago. He came here from Honolulu, thus clinching distance honors.

James C. Berger, treasurer, and James H. Price, Lieutenant Governor of Virginia and imperial recorder, were among the national officers who reached the Capital yesterday. Mr. Berger came from Denver. Others included Hugh M. Caldwell, of Seattle, chief rabban, and Walter S. Sugden, of Sistersville, W. Va., high priest and prophet.

Jack McGilvray, past potentate of Islam Temple, San Francisco, and Arthur Chapman, of Winnipeg, also arrived.

Pennsylvania Avenue Thronged.

The carnival spirit into which downtown Washington plunged with zest when the parade route lights were turned on Thursday night was revived last night when another illumination test was held. Pennsylvania avenue was crowded with automobiles, street cars moved at snail's pace and thousands of pedestrians strolled up and down the thoroughfare talking of little else but the grand convention, which

New York, June 7.—Police continued an extensive search tonight for 5-year-old Johnny Kaul, whose parents believe he was mistakenly adbducted from the fashionable Sutton place district, where he was playing late yesterday when last seen.

Of moderate means, although residing near a wealthy neighborhood, the Kauls expressed fear their son was abducted under the impression he could be ransomed.

Police disagreed, although not discarding the theory that he possibly

MacDonald Out, Baldwin Takes Reins

Failing Health Is Cause of Veteran Leader's Retirement.

New Regime Notifies U. S. Debt Holiday Will Continue.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

London, June 7.—White-haired Ramsay MacDonald, veteran fighter for peace, stepped out as Great Britain's prime minister today and Stanley Baldwin, who typefies "John Bull" himself to Americans, stepped in.

The leader of the Conservative Party, who has been prime minister twice before, lost no time in reconstructing the cabinet, in which Macdonald took Baldwin's former place as lord president of the council.

Five new faces appeared in the ministerial line-up, which retained the "national government" complexion. Three former ministers retired, one of them, Sir Edward Hilton Young, outgoing minister of health, to be raised to the peerage.

Four-Minute Shift.

So smoothly was the cabinet shift accomplished that only four minutes intervened between MacDonald's presentation of his portfolio to King George in his majesty's private apartment at Buckingham Palace and Baldwin's arrival to receive the mandate.

Failing health, coupled with eye trouble, led to MacDonald's decision to end six years and two days as prime minister. His relief was obvious, for he smiled broadly as he arrived, in top hat and morning coat, at the palace.

New ministers in the Baldwin government are:

Capt. Anthony Eden, minister for League of Nations affairs. Young Eden, formerly Lord Privy Seal, an office not of ministerial rank, had been prominently mentioned for the foreign office.

The Marquess of Zetland, secretary for India. A former governor of Bengal, an oriental scholar, writer and traveler, he is 59 years old.

MacDonald's Son.

Malcolm MacDonald, secretary for colonies. Young MacDonald, the retiring prime minister's son, was undersecretary for dominions in his father's government.

Ernest Brown, minister of labor. Brown was raised to cabinet rank from his previous non-cabinet post as minister of mines.

Lord Eustace Percy, minister without portfolio. Percy sits in the House of Commons, not Lords.

Outgoing ministers are Lord Sankey, lord chancellor; Sir John Gilmour, home secretary, and Young.

Despite hints that Sir John Simon, previously foreign secretary, was on the way out, he appeared in the new line-up as home secretary and deputy leader of the House of Commons, thus indicating that his astute lawyer's and diplomat's brain will still play an important part in determining the Baldwin policies.

As the ailing MacDonald left for his home in Lossiemouth, Scotland, as he said "to seek respite from the heavy and continuous strain of the past six years both at home and abroad," the new administration made its first official pronouncement—that it would not pay an instalment on the war debt owed the United States which falls due this month.

A note delivered to Washington said Britain saw no reason for altering her decision suspending the war debt payments but again of-

U. S. 'Crime School' to Train Non-Federal Men Proposed Comprehensive Methods to Be Taught in Institute Program Planned by Department of Justice This Summer.

By the Associated Press.

Stamford, Conn., June 7.—A fourfold expansion program, by which the Justice Department will help to train local police and prison officers at a national "crime institute," was outlined tonight by Attorney General Cummings in a speech at the tercentenary of the First Congregational Church.

The plans outlined called for:

Opening a scientific training school to selected personnel from State and metropolitan police forces, probably this summer.

Similar training for non-Federal prison officials by the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

Submission to Congress of a plan for a Federal Bureau of Crime Prevention to coordinate and direct national efforts.

Use of this bureau and the criminal division of the Justice Department to train United States attorneys, marshals and commissioners.

The Attorney General said the plans, suggested by the national conference on crime here last December, were intended to curb "the growth of organized crime in its interstate aspects," including the "kidnapers and extortionists" that "have invaded our homes and imperiled our families and our children."

He said there were "scores of requests" for the training of non-Federal officers and "we are now prepared to open the doors of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to representative police officers.

"Plant, technical equipment, scientific facilities, lecturers and instructors will be available for this important work," he added.

The training course in prison work for "selected State and other officers in this field" will be under Sanford Bates, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

Cummings stated:

"Here will be studied the development of scientific information on which to base comprehensive modern methods of parole, probation, and pardon; modern methods of jail and prison construction; modern methods of classification, segregation and treatment of criminals; the effects of the various forms of punishment, advanced penological technique in prisons, jails, and work camps, and a host of similar matters."

Pacific Battle Games Ended By Reeves in Surprise Order

By the Associated Press.

Aboard the U. S. S. Pennsylvania at Sea, June 7.—A surprise message from Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, commander-in-chief of the United States battle fleet, today ended the Navy's most comprehensive peace-time battle maneuvers.

Scurrying units of the fleet were laying smoke screens in one of the most elaborate operations of naval "problem 16" when Admiral Reeves flashed the signal to cease the imaginary engagement.

The order was issued at noon. Slipping from battle formations, the powerful flotilla swept quickly into a peaceful cruising formation and continued toward San Diego, Calif., where the maneuvers will be concluded officially with arrival of the fleet Monday.

"Cancel scheduled exercises this afternoon and Saturday," the admiral's message said.

Completion of the mock engagement was signaled by Admiral Reeves a short time after Rear Admiral William H. Standley left the flagship Pennsylvania, reboarding the light cruiser U. S. S. Memphis.

Rear Admiral Standley, who joined the fleet aboard the Memphis Wednesday after a late start from Honolulu, and Admiral Reeves were among the most interested observers witnessing an impressive aerial maneuver today.

Planes from the aircraft carrier Saratoga were successful in driving off a large force of destroyers in an opening clash in which the destroyers theoretically were seeking to attack the battleship forces.

House Votes Extension Of NRA to April, 1936, As Richberg Steps Out

White House Defers Unity Of Transport

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Recommending early passages of various pending piece-meal measures designed to relieve and improve transportation units in this country, President Roosevelt in a special message to Congress yesterday announced he would withhold until next winter proposals for transformation of the Interstate Commerce Commission into an all-embracing Federal Transportation Commission.

Such a reorganization of the I.C.C., Mr. Roosevelt asserted, should not be delayed, however, beyond the second or next session of the present Congress. In the meanwhile he proposed continuation for at least another year of Joseph B. Eastman's office of transportation co-ordinator.

The President explained it had been his intention to propose to the present session of Congress centralization of authority over rail, water, motor and air transportation in one commission, but "the time remaining seems to preclude the discussions necessary for such changes."

Hints at Adjournment.

This was taken as a hint that Mr. Roosevelt is eager to have Congress adjourn as soon as it can dispose of matters which cannot be deferred until the next session. In this connection he said at his semi-weekly press conference that he had given no thought to the question of increasing inheritance tax rates for more than a month and did not know whether he would send up a message on the subject. Agitation for boosting the death taxes became noticeable on Capitol Hill earlier in the week.

Although Mr. Roosevelt commenced his message by asserting that "it is high time to deal with the Nation's transportation as a single unified problem," the remainder of his message made it clear that solution of this problem must wait another year.

Mr. Roosevelt recommended early passage of:

Amendments proposed by Mr. Eastman to the railroad bankruptcy act of two years ago to facilitate reorganization and refinancing.

Legislation defining the relationship between air carriers and the Federal Government—carrying of the mails chiefly—with jurisdiction lodged in the I. C. C.

Pending bill for Federal regulation of motor buses and trucks engaged in interstate commerce.

Legislation placing regulation of intercoastal and coastwise trade and some of the inland water carriers under the I. C. C.

New Equipment Urged.

Meanwhile Mr. Eastman made public a comprehensive report on studies in which he and his assistants have been engaged during the last year. One of their findings was that due to the infrequency of schedules and terminal delays, railroad transportation was much slower in general than highway service and not much faster than water or pipeline service.

Present types of freight cars were declared to be poorly adapted to present commercial needs. Development of new freight equipment was advocated, but in view of the fact that present freight facilities are in excess of prospective demand, the report contended, new equipment should be acquired only where it will pay for itself and where demanded by general considerations.

Another point made by the report was that shipment by highways was the most expensive form of transportation, with water and

Green Appeals To the Public For New NRA

Sees Industrial Strife if Codes Are Erased; Defense Fund Begun.

By Felix Bruner.

Labor carried its fight for a new NRA to the people last night when William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, appealed to the country by radio to support the union plan for an effective recovery act.

As an evidence of its determination, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, of which Sidney Hillman, one of the retiring members of the National Industrial Recovery Board, is president, voted a $1,000,000 defense fund for maintenance of NRA hours and wages.

The Associated Press reported from New York that Hillman had announced each of the union's 125,000 workers would be assessed $10 or more for the fund. Workers in New York, Philadelphia and Chicago already have subscribed $500,000.

Backed by a statement of policy adopted by the executive council of the federation, Green declared in his radio talk that employers who hope to maintain wages and hours will be undermined by a chiseling minority.

"That will mean strife, strikes and industrial conflicts because the workers of the Nation will not willingly submit to a destruction of code standards, reductions in wages and increases in hours of work," he said.

"The same employers who employed child labor and established the sweatshop own and control industry now. They have not changed. Furthermore, the effect of ruthless competition is the same whenever and wherever practiced.

"Today there are slightly over 11,000,000 unemployed. What can we now do for them? What do those who have hailed the Supreme Court's decision with exclamations of joy and approval propose as a means of overcoming unemployment? What solution and what hope do they offer to these millions of unemployed and their distressed families dependent upon them? Labor proposes the enactment of a 30-hour work week bill with all sincerity, firm in its belief that, if enacted into law, it will serve to distribute great additional work opportunities for the millions who are un-

Plan Wins, 264 to 121; Roosevelt and Leaders Split on Powers.

Signs of Conflict Seen in Senate

Recovery Board's Chief Tenders Resignation Effective June 16.

By Robert C. Albright.

A 9½-month extension of the hollow shell of NRA yesterday was rushed through the House by a 264-to-121 vote as Donald R. Richberg, who rode with the Blue Eagle on its stormy flight, tendered his resignation.

The Richberg resignation, effective June 16, was accepted by the President with a request that his former New Deal co-ordinator and NRA administrator remain for a short period "in order to transfer as effectively as possible" his duties to the succeeding organization.

The man who fought with Hugh Johnson over NRA policy, but lived to succeed both Johnson and Ray Moley as No. 1 New Dealist, will retire to private practice, victim perhaps of a bitter labor assault and the Supreme Court's Blue Eagle coup.

House passage of the codeless NRA resolution came at the close of a turbulent 6-hour session, with a dominant Democratic majority successfully overriding every amendment. The resolution goes to the Senate, which has the option of concurring or demanding a conference.

Lineup on Vote.

Only 6 Republicans joined with 251 Democrats, 3 Progressives and 2 Farmer-Laborites in approving the skeleton extension, while 81 Republicans, 37 Democrats, 2 Progressives and 1 Farmer-Laborite voted "No."

While the House sped this measure to passage, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, took the radio to oppose the plan and offer in its stead labor's own recovery substitute. Green warned of industrial conflict if code standards are lowered.

Throwing a $1,000,000 defense fund behind labor's fight for wages and hours maintenance, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America in New York assessed each of the union's 125,000 workers $10 or more, according to the Associated Press. Sidney Hillman, president of the organization, and retiring member of the NIRA board, said $500,000 already has been subscribed.

Confusion as to the scope of the abridged measure spread as the White House and Democratic sponsors of the resolution in the House placed conflicting interpretations on what can be done under scant NRA powers remaining.

The President told newspapermen that business may still get together

President Leaves For Hyde Park

President Roosevelt last midnight left by train for his Hyde Park home on the Hudson River to remain until Wesdnesday, when, after presenting diplomas to the graduating class at the Military Academy at West Point, he will return here to review the first night parade of the Shriners.

The trip to the President's home, while affording him a change of atmosphere, will not be a vacation. Mr. Roosevelt took with him a thick portfolio of papers relating to matters which have developed in the last two weeks but which he has been unable to examine due to the pressure of developments following the invalidation of NRA.

Freed from the necessity of daily receiving a stream of callers and of hourly consultations with his administrative aids, the President in the next few days will be able to give his undivided attention to these matters. His trip to West Point is his only engagement.

Most of NRA Staff to Remain After June 16 for Record Work

Most of the employes of the NRA will be kept on after June 16, expiration date of the old act, to "mop up," it was learned authoritatively yesterday.

This came as good news to the 5,400 workers who have been wondering since the NRA Supreme Court decision was handed down just how soon the blow would fall.

It was stated that there remains a great deal to be done in the next few weeks in compiling records, filing and actually winding up the work of the NRA.

The same source intimated that an effort would be made to keep most of the organization intact during the present session of Congress because of the possibility that Congress may yet find a way of extending the major part of the recovery act.

No steps have yet been taken to set up the two new organizations provided in President Roosevelt's legislative program, a research organization and an organization to administer provisions that Government contractors must comply with wage and hour requirements.

It was said that the Government intended to give NRA employes the same consideration they would have a right to expect from a private employer. It had previously been announced that accumulated leaves would be granted.

Under the present plan it is expected that the NRA organization will be disbanded gradually, with a sufficient number of employes to carry out the new functions retained.

PWA Extended Indefinitely By President

Persons on Relief Rolls During May Get Preference in Employment.

President Roosevelt, by executive order, yesterday extended the life of the Public Works Administration indefinitely.

Acting under provisions of the works relief law, which authorized him to extend provisions of title 2 of the recovery act, the President authorized the PWA to continue to perform all the functions it has performed in the past.

The order authorized the PWA to make loans and grants, provided that 25 per cent of the amount in each instance is spent for labor. It continued the housing division, permitted the PWA to sell securities acquired as security for loans and to acquire land.

Employment Preference.

At the same time President Roosevelt issued another order providing that persons on relief rolls during May be given preference in employment under the works program.

The order also provided that persons employed on works projects who accept temporary private employment will still be eligible for jobs on works projects at the termination of their private employment. This provision was made for the purpose of meeting objections that relief employment would discourage acceptance of temporary private jobs.

Although persons on relief rolls in May will be given preference, the order provides that as the various occupational classes in this group are exhausted through employment, persons who went on relief rolls on a subsequent date and persons certified to the Works Progress Administration and the United States Employment Service by State Emergency Relief Administrations may be added to the list of those eligible for such employment.

Aimed at Chiselers.

The plan for giving preference to persons on relief rolls in May was believed to be intended to prevent persons from deliberately going on relief rolls to obtain works relief employment.

The order also directed the Employment Service to notify the Works Administration of all persons who leave works jobs for private employment and of all persons being transferred from job to job.

Finally, the order provided:

"Persons who are certified for assignment work on projects shall be accepted or rejected by those having responsibility for the management of such employment solely on the basis of their fitness to perform the assigned tasks and shall not be discriminated against on any other grounds whatsoever."

Jewish Center Pool Is Opened to Boys

Free Use Is Granted to Two Organizations.

The Jewish Community Center announced yesterday that permission has been granted to the Boys' Clubs and the Christ Child Society for free use of the Center pool during the summer months.

More than 1,000 boys are expected to make use of this privilege, including members of the Northeast Boys Club, Merrick Boys Club, the Christ Child Society, the Washington Boys Club and the Boys Club of the Metropolitan Police.

Cooperating with the Community Chest, the Jewish Community Center three years ago inaugurated the policy permitting the use of the pool to the under-privileged. Since that time the number of the boys using the tank has increased rapidly.

Between You and Me

Choate Curbs the Ardent Wets; Tact Aids Wine Industry; False Ad Cases Collapse.

By Raymond Clapper

PROHIBITION and temperance leaders of yesteryear, with their white ribbons and hatchets, are gone.

Wayne B. Wheeler and Edwin C. Dinwiddie, the two men who directed the campaign which put the eighteenth amendment into the Constitution and then parted company, are dead.

F. Scott McBride, the man who then took charge of the Anti Saloon League and tried to hold the fort, has dropped so competely out of sight that the younger generation around the cocktail bars get him mixed up with his contemporary, F. Scott Fitzgerald, whose apper novels were so popular with the young post-war flask toters who horrified the other F. Scott.

In their place the Nation's temperance leader now is the tall, thin, dry-witted Joseph H. Choate, head of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, which the Supreme Court knocked across the River Styx along with NRA, from which its authority was derived.

Joe Choate, as Mr. Roosevelt has called him from their boyhood days together, is no white ribboner. He mixes a cocktail like a professional and knows almost all that an amateur is expected to know about wines.

He worked out the system which speeded up repeal by advising States how they could enact anticipatory legislation for liquor regulation to take effect when the eighteenth amendment was repealed. This answered those who were nervous about abandoning prohibition without putting something in its place. Two-thirds of the States were thus prepared for repeal when it came. This aided greatly in the easy transition from bathtub to bottle liquor.

Because of that and because he was a smart enough lawyer—before Roosevelt's inauguration—to dig up the old war-time trading-with-the-enemy act which gave the new President a legal pretext for closing the banks and embargoing gold, Mr. Roosevelt rewarded him by giving him the touchy job of holding the reborn liquor industry in check under the ephemeral powers wrung out of NIRA.

Choate, a repealist, was smart enough to know that the only way to keep the prohibitionists down was to make repeal work. He exercised a firm hand, within the law when possible, or by personal persuasion if he didn't have the authority. These personal crackdowns have done much toward preventing reckless buccaneers in the revived liquor industry from bringing public wrath down on John Barleycorn again. Choate has actually got the old boy out of the gutter, washed him up, taught him drawing-room manners, and in general made him such a swanky gentleman that the ladies will now appear in public with him.

But he boxes the old chap's ears down every once in a while.

Recently a distiller inserted an advertisement in a newspaper labeled "an open letter to women." This appeal to encourage whisky drinking among women explained suavely that times and customs change, that not so long ago smoking by women was seldom seen.

"Times continue to change," the advertisement said. "Women have discovered that they, too, can enjoy an excellent cocktail, a smooth highball or an after-dinner liquer."

These distributors went on to say that they recognize this change and felt privileged to call to the attention of women a marvelous whisky with "that softness and satin smoothness that a discriminating woman naturally seeks."

Choate thought this was an improper advance and he wrote the offending distributor, warning him that this sort of stuff played straight into the hands of the lurking dry, gave them powerful ammunition, was the perfect example of the evil of which the drys were complaining.

"In my judgment," Choate wrote, "if you want to be deprived altogether of the advantages of advertising, you have only to continue for a short time the publication of such matter, which will build up an opposition to your business against which the friends of freedom and moderation will be helpless. You could find no better means to further the return of prohibition."

Further issues of this advertisement were immediately canceled. Within a few days other liquor distributors, taking the cue, were appearing with advertisements like one which was headed: "We who make whisky say drinking and driving do not mix." It continued: "Liquor has no place in the front seat of an automobile. Alcohol and gasoline do not mix. It is very much to our self-interest to see that the privilege of drinking is not abused. Whisky is a luxury and should be treated as such. It should be taken in moderation and only in its proper place."

Another firm, celebrating the anniversary of repeal with an advertisement carrying a picture of President Roosevelt and the line, "We thank you," brought a rebuke from Choate which resulted in an official of the company rushing to the White House with apologies.

Choate is supported in his efforts by the Distillers Institute headed by Dr. James M. Doran, former prohibition commissioner. This organization scrutinizes all liquor advertising and is constantly on the lookout for unethical sales arguments.

The wine industry has been working more tactfully than many distillers.

One of its recent triumphs was in the once dry State of North Carolina, where Josephus Daniels became so imbued with the crusade against the evils of drink that as soon as he became Secretary of the Navy in the Wilson Administration, he banished wine from the Navy shipboard mess. North Carolina has just enacted a statute classifying wine as food and legalizing its manufacture. That in one of the first States to go dry. Now the juice of the grape, even when it is red, may be sold and distributed as freely as potatoes.

And in Georgia recently the making of light wines was legalized, according to the preamble of the act, "to promote temperance and prosperity for Georgia people; to foster and encourage the growing of grapes, fruits and berries on Georgia farms." The voter approved the measure in a State-wide referendum.

Temporarily the wrecking of NRA has suspended FACA activities. It has had to dismiss several hundred court cases.

Among them were 150 cases charging false advertising which had been sent to the Federal Trade Commission under code regulations which the Supreme Court declared unconstitutional. A case against a large distiller who had been shipping carloads of liquor into dry States in barrels labelled "apples" had to be dropped. A New Orleans firm which had been trucking high-powered beer into Texas over the 3.2 per cent limitation is now relieved of the unpleasant task of defending itself. In New Jersey, where the bootlegging has been exceptionally heavy, a large number of cases have been dropped without smashing a bottle.

An official of a domestic match manufacturing company came to Washington and was getting along very well with his argument against importation of foreign matches until he was asked what his salary was. It proved to be almost exactly the same as the value of imported matches per year.

In commenting on President Roosevelt's recent NRA utterances, one prominent newspaper has reached a new high in consistency.

When Mr. Roosevelt said he would carry the issue raised by the Supreme Court in the Schechter case to the country, he was criticized for not being a "good sportsman and a good loser."

A few days later after Mr. Roosevelt decided to drop all but the skeleton of NRA, the same editorial column remarked that this was not good sportsmanship, but "defeatism, to give it its mildest term."

Roosevelt can't even please one editor, let alone everybody.

Liquor Firm Adopts Pact on Advertising

An agreement concerning advertisement of liquor by the Star Liquor Co., Washington, was announced yesterday by the Federal Trade Commission.

"The stipulation," a Trade Commission announcement explained, "says that the Star company advertised 'Scotland Yard Scotch (type)' with the word 'type' in inconspicuous letters, when in fact the whisky was not a Scotch whisky."

"The company agrees to cease advertising the products by this name unless they are Scotland Yard type whisky and then only if the word 'type' is printed in equally conspicuous letters."

Fund Is Asked For Ship Basin At Cabin John

Works Agency Also Gets Plea for $3,000,000 for 2 Census Projects.

Allotment of $4,200,000 to build the long-sought Cabin John model ship basin was requested of the Works Division of Applications and Information yesterday by the Navy Department.

Another outstanding application was for expenditure of $1,000,000 on a new Census Bureau annex here to remedy the situation now existing under which the agency "is scattered all over Washington."

A third important request, also by the Census Bureau, was for $2,000,000 to finance compilation of an alphabetical card index of all persons listed in the 1930 census. The information will be used to check old-age pension claims.

Headquarters for the project, the bureau reported, should be in Philadelphia "to relieve the pressure for office space in Washington and to have a wider selection of unemployed personnel."

The Navy has been unsuccessful in many attempts to obtain the model ship basin money. The latest application pointed out options for purchase of the land would expire in September.

"This project," the application read, "will be used partly for the design of naval vessels, but largely for design of merchant vessels to improve mold lines and decrease fuel consumption and operating expenses. Similar work in England has saved several million dollars per year in cost of merchant ship operation."

Other Navy Department applications were for construction of an experimental ammunition laboratory at the Washington Navy Yard and accessories, $26,400; for replacement of obsolete sailing directions and for other hydrographic office work, $4,740, and for work on original copper engraved plates of nautical charts from foreign charts, replacing obsolete documents, $72,000.

End of Chaco War Reported in Sight

Mediators Agreed on All Except Truce Phrasing.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, June 7.—An end to the bitter, bloody Chaco war, three years old this month, seemed definitely in sight tonight.

Foreign Ministers of Bolivia and Paraguay, the belligerents, reached an agreement with neutral American mediators on the basic points of an accord to end hostilities.

After the Argentine, Brazilian, Chilean, Peruvian and Uruguayan mediation group met, Jose Carlos Macedo Soares, Brazilian foreign minister, said only difficulties connected with phrasing of the agreement remained to be straightened out.

Meanwhile, dispatches from La Paz said fighting continued in the Ingavi sector, after Bolivian forces repelled Paraguayan attacks in the Quebrada, Cuevo and Parapiti sectors.

Mitshurin, 'Burbank' Of Russia, Succumbs

Mitshurinsk, U. S. S. R., June 7 (AP).—Ivan Mitshurin, Soviet Russia's "Burbank," died today at the age of 75.

A week-long battle for the life of the man who wrought wonders with plants proved unavailing, even though Dictator Joseph Stalin sent the Soviet Union's best physicians to attempt to save him from his combination of ailments.

The whole nation mourned the Grand Old Man of Russian horticulture. His achievements in crossing fruit trees and plants were recognized and given close study abroad long before he became renowned at home.

The esteem in which he was held was evidenced by the fact that this town, formerly Kozloff, was renamed in his honor.

New Earthquake Hits Formosa, Loss Heavy

Taihoku, Formosa, June 7 (U.P.).—Central Formosa was shaken by another earthquake at 10:50 a. m. today, doing widespread property damage and injuring several natives.

Reports over damaged telegraph lines said the center apparently was far inland in this Japan-controlled island off the China coast, and details were meager. The village of Saraokushow, in Taikow County, Daichu Province, was apparently hardest hit. A school and market building were wrecked. Known casualties tonight were 5 injured and 15 houses demolished.

Mrs. Carey and Her Son Hanged in Delaware

Georgetown, Del., June 7 (AP).—A gray-haired grandmother and her son were hanged on the gallows in Sussex Prison yard today because they murdered her brother for a few hundred dollars of his insurance policy.

Tight-lipped and dry-eyed, Mrs. May H. Carey, 55, and Howard Carey, 27, walked unassisted up the 13 steps to the scaffold just after daybreak. Two hours later they were buried in a rural cemetery in nearby Frankford with six State troopers as their pallbearers.

Third Lamson Trial For Wife-Murder Set

San Jose, Calif., June 7 (AP).—The third trial of David A. Lamson, former Stanford University Press executive, charged with murdering his wife, Allene, was set today for September 23. Lamson was convicted in his first trial and sentenced to death. The State Supreme Court granted him a retrial. The jury in the second trial was discharged recently after reporting inability to reach a verdict. Lamson will remain in jail.

Richberg Retorts To Johnson Remark

The old feud between Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, first NRA administrator, and Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board, flared again yesterday.

Richberg declared that "on no occasion, to any person, under any circumstances, have I said I would stake my legal reputation on the Schechter case." This was the case in which the Supreme Court declared NRA codes invalid.

In a speech before the Washington Advertising Club last Tuesday, Gen. Johnson said: "The decision clearly came as a shock to some who said that they had staked their legal reputations on winning every point of it."

Johnson did not mention Richberg by name.

Subpena Fight Forces Respite In Mellon Case

Tax Hearing Suspends as U. S., Refused Records, Plans Court Plea.

Indefinite postponement of the Mellon income tax hearing was ordered yesterday by Ernest H. Van Fossan, chairman of the special tax appeals board.

Robert H. Jackson, Internal Revenue Bureau counsel, suggested the continuance after the Union Trust Co., Pittsburgh, again failed to produce certain records sought by subpena.

John G. Frazer, lawyer for the bank, who Thursday submitted a letter of refusal, was not in the courtroom.

Jackson reiterated the Federal Court at Pittsburgh would be asked to enforce the subpena. Both he and Frank J. Hogan, chief of counsel for Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, agreed the development may lead to a delay of six months in the case.

Hogan and Jackson probably will argue the issue next week before a Pittsburgh judge. Later the losing side will take the case to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

The Government has attempted to compel the bank to disclose details of financial transactions between the former Cabinet officer and his brother, the late R. B. Mellon.

Federal lawyers have sought to collect $3,000,000 in additional taxes and penalties on Mellon's 1931 income. He countered with a claim for a rebate of $139,000.

School Boy Injured On Baltimore Road

Crossing the Baltimore boulevard on his way to school, Albert Seaton, 8, of Berwyn, Md., was knocked down and seriously injured yesterday morning.

At Providence Hospital, where he was taken by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad, Albert was said to have a fractured left leg and concussion of the brain.

Claude Reese, Prince Georges County policeman, said William H. Merrill, a Pocomoke City (Md.) auto dealer, was the driver of the car that struck the boy. He summoned Merrill to appear before Justice of the Peace George S. Phillips at Berwyn June 19.

Town Hall Trustees Hear Annual Reports

Holding their annual meeting, members of the board of trustees of the Town Hall Thursday afternoon gathered in the home of Miss Grace Roper, associate director.

Huston Thompson presided and reports were presented by the directors, Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan and Miss Grace Roper, and the treasurer, Admiral Mark Bristol.

Preceding the meeting, the trustees and incorporators elected Wayne Williams, special assistant to the Attorney General, to the board. Slight changes were made in the organization's charter.

New Self-Help Group Will Be Formed in D.C.

A new self-help cooperative unit to help unemployed men and women will be organized at a meeting Tuesday night in Thomson School, Twelfth and L streets northwest. The meeting, for white relief applicants, will open at 8 p. m. R. L. Whipple, organizer for the District of Columbia, announced yesterday.

The 19 self-help cooperatives already established in Washington seek to aid needy persons by paying them in food and clothing for work performed for the cooperative.

Young Patients Watch Program of Circus Acts

Clowns and bareback riders of the Johnny J. Jones show entertained the 150 young patients of Children's Hospital yesterday.

One of the outstanding attractions was a team of clowns, one 6 and the other 70 years old. The animals performed outdoors while clowns went through the wards to amuse children unable to leave their beds.

Ely Phillips was in charge of the program.

Normal and above normal rainfall in the Southwest during May was said to have relieved definitely the drought that had persisted in southwestern Kansas and southeastern Colorado to Texas and New Mexico since 1930.

Wheeler, Foes Reach Accord On Utility Bill

Bailey Agrees to Drop Batch of Amendments; Early Passage Seen.

The Wheeler public utility bill yesterday was headed toward Senate passage early next week, with its proponents agreeing to some slight alterations but insisting that it retain substantially the power to shatter the Nation-wide holding companies into regional systems within five to seven years.

Administration leaders, headed by Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, in charge of the bill, placated the opposition of Senator Bailey (Democrat) North Carolina, at a conference that continued until the early hours of this mrning and gained agreement from him to withdraw most of the twoscore amendments he had proposed.

Bailey's plan at first to convert the bill into a measure carrying power only to regulate interstate business of holding companies was changed, and Wheeler said the North Carolinian had agreed to accept instead certain minor clarifying amendments, together with one more comprehensive.

The chief Bailey amendment approved by Wheeler and adopted would strike out the provision requiring holding companies to agree in advance to regulations and rules of the Securities and Exchange Commission when they come up next September 1 for registration.

A whole cluster of amendments was written into the bill during the afternoon, including one by a bitter opponent of the measure, Senator White (Republican), Maine, won acceptance of a amendment exempting from the bill power companies which used 75 per cent of their own output.

An amendment proposed by Wheeler struck out of the bill the power given the commission to initiate receivership proceedings against companies if it found them "insolvent or unable to pay debts as they mature." The bill retained the requirement, however, that in event a Federal court decided the companies in question should go into receivership, the commission at its request must be appointed the receiver with power to prescribe the form of reorganization.

Auto Club Surveys Northwest Routes

Heavy Motoring Traffic From East Expected.

Anticipating tourist traffic directly from the East to the Northwest will shatter all records this year, the American Automobile Association, through its National Touring Bureau, announced yesterday it was making a special survey and preparing reports on new and improved motor routes to this section.

In close cooperation with its affiliated motor clubs and the Pacific Northwest Tourist Association, formed for the purpose of encouraging travel to the Northwest over transcontinental motor routes, bus lines and railroads, the A. A. A. will make a careful study of the Northwestern road system and its Eastern connections.

Information obtained from these surveys will be distributed to the A. A. A.'s 839 affiliated clubs, and these clubs, in turn, will relay it to members planning to take vacation trips.

Third Judge Is Assigned To D.C. Criminal Docket

In an effort to clear up the congested criminal docket of the District Supreme Court before the summer recess next month, Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat yesterday announced the establishment of a third criminal court judge to assist Justices James M. Proctor and Joseph W. Cox. The third court will be taken over by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, now sitting in civil court.

The change will be made effective Monday, it was announced. Another announcement yesterday made known that the nine justices would recess Tuesday in order to permit attorneys and court attaches to watch the Shrine parade. The clerk's office will be kept open with a skeleton force to care for emergency matters.

Bar Unit Urges A Life Tenure For All Judges

Crime Checks Depend on Police Not New Laws, Report Adds.

Permanent tenure during good behavior of all judges was recommended yesterday by a committee of the American Bar Association.

The committee also suggested concentration on improvement of the efficiency of law enforcement agencies rather than passage of new criminal laws.

Committee members participating in the study included John Parker White, professor of law, University of Michigan, chairman; Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant Attorney General; Judge Harry B. Keidan, Detroit; Samuel Seabury, New York; Charles P. Taft 2d, Cincinnati, and Harry Eugene Kelly, Chicago.

White will present the report at a convention of the association next month in Los Angeles.

Urge Crime Committees.

Appointment or election of judges for life, the committee held, would "free the judiciary from the harmful psychological effects of dependence on political favor."

Of improvement of police agencies the committee reported:

"Substantial improvement in law enforcement is possible only through improvement in the efficiency of agents by whom the law is enforced * * *.

"So long as the public attempts to make crime suppression more effective by changes in the criminal law, it will meet continued disappointment."

Establishment by individual communities of citizens' criminal justice committees was suggested.

Caution Against Bias.

"An organization," the committee cautioned, however, "may so center its interest and attention on one aspect of justice, such as prosecution or bail, as to lose sight of other phases, and the picture it paints in its report may, in consequence, be biased or misleading.

"If by evil chance, partisanship creeps into the group, its reports may be falsely incomplete. Nevertheless, your committee believes that the potential good in the establishment of such organizations far outweighs the possibilities of evil.

"To avoid as far as possible the danger of partisanship or bias, such organizations should be absolutely independent of the Government, both financially and in their membership. They should be composed of persons having no possibility of profit through inaccurate or incomplete reports. On the other hand, they should not be confined to members of the bar."

Ex-Dry Agent Admits Dealing As Bootlegger

Former Inspector Tells of Trade at Roanoke Conspiracy Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., June 7.—A former State prohibition inspector admitted at the trial of alleged Franklin County liquor conspirators here this afternoon that he engaged in the "whisky-brandy" business among other ventures prior to his appointment.

From Edgar A. Beckett, 45, appointed an inspector in 1923, the Government wrung the admission late this afternoon before the seventh week of the trial ended with Beckett, the third defendant to testify and the 105th defense witness, still on the stand.

Beckett admitted, too, that he is "worth" approximately $31,000, in money, bonds and property, but pointed out that his holdings were valued in 1922 at about $22,000, and that he had saved some of the $2,500 or $3,000 yearly he made from his salary and fees as an inspector.

Entering a sweeping denial concerning 30 specific instances of removing blockades on roads, dividing "granny fees" or accepting alleged "protection" money, Beckett said in his defense that reports on his activities in Richmond would show that in five years he "cut up" stills at the rate of 125 a year; arrested 615 persons, and seized 220 automobiles engaged in the illicit liquor traffic.

He said instructions of the late John G. Saunders advised against cutting "dry" stills, so that men could be caught at the sites later.

The Government focused attention also on the murder of T. J. "Jeff" Richards, deputy who was shot in ambush, and Beckett, who was with Richards that day—October 12, 1934—to arrest a colored man who was killed with Richards, outlined in detail all his and Richards' activities of the day.

officially gets under way tomorrow and lasts all next week.

It was announced that the amplification system, said to be the most elaborate public address hook-up ever installed anywhere, is ready for use. Completion of the formidable installation job meant the climax of two months' work has been reached. Or, more properly, the climax will be reached Tuesday morning when the loud speakers are first brought into play for the imperial escort parade.

Traffic lights, in outlying sections as well as downtown, will be in operation 24 hours a day during the entire course of the convention, according to an announcement yesterday by William A. Van Duzer, traffic director. The order will go into effect Sunday night and be in force until Friday midnight.

Special traffic regulations in Potomac Park, where Army exhibitions, band concerts, a regatta and other events will be held beginning Sunday, were disclosed by Capt. Patrick J. Carroll, chief of the United States Park Police.

Other Traffic Rulings.

The rule against parking on the inside lane of Riverside Drive (the "speedway") will be lifted tomorrow, said Capt. Carroll, as a convenience to spectators attending the Shrine regatta and sports carnival. However, the usual custom of allowing motor traffic to move one way only, both going to and coming from Hains Point, will prevail during the boat races, he declared.

Contrary to the usual practice, two-hour parking on West Executive avenue between Pennsylvania avenue and State place will be forbidden Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the three big days of the Shrine convention. Only persons transacting official business at the White House or State Department will be permitted to use this space for parking.

From 8 a. m. Monday until 6 p. m. Thursday parking will be banned around the Ellipse, south of the White House. This step was taken, Capt. Carroll explained, in deference to visiting nobles and their guests and friends attending the band concerts, Army drills and other features scheduled to be held in the vicinity.

Hospital Board Feted.

Last night Robert P. Smith, potentate of Washington's host temple, and Mrs. Smith, entertained members of the hospital board of trustees at the Smith home, 5001 Sixteenth street northwest. He also gave a luncheon in their honor at the Willard Hotel. Tonight the same group will be received at the home of L. P. Steuart, imperial deputy potentate, who will be elected successor to Imperial Potentate Dana S. Williams next week.

Delegates and members of at least 15 temples will arrive in the Capital tomorrow by train, parading from Union Station to Willard Hotel headquarters and then disbanding to go to their hotels. The Jaffa Temple contingent, from Altoona, Pa., will reach here tomorrow, first of the units coming in by motor caravan.

Grandstand construction is practically completed, William C. Miller, committee chairman, said, and all chairs will be in their places by Monday.

Outline of Events Issued.

Edward F. Colladay, chairman of the communications committee, issued an outline of events which will be carried over the amplification system, whose 13 stations will be controlled from a master booth in front of the Treasury Building.

Aside from the parade and pageant on Pennsylvania avenue, loud speakers also will serve those who attend divine services on Temple Heights tomorrow morning and the thousands of spectators at the Georgetown channel regatta tomorrow afternoon. Radio announcers located on the sea wall and aboard the Coast Guard cutter Apache, the judges' boat, will describe the regatta events.

The 13 stations which will serve parade and pageant spectators and pedestrians desirous of hearing the principal addresses at the opening session of the imperial council at the National Theater Tuesday will be located on Pennsylvania avenue between Constitution avenue and Seventeenth street.

For the grand climax of the sixty-first annual conclave — the pageant Thursday night—the voices and music of each of the 10 acts, or sets, will be amplified over all 13 systems. As each stage comes to rest, wire connections will be made from the sidewalk. When the act ends, the attendant will come out from the curb, disconnect the amplification wires, and the stage will proceed to the next stop along the route.

The elaborate sound system will be used for the massed band concert and other events in West Potomac Park, street dancing, banquets and balls and miscellaneous features.

"Between the principal convention events, we proposed to maintain a pleasant, unobtrusive background of music playing throughout the system," said A. C. Tiedemann, jr., General Motors Corporation official, who supervised the installation. The hookup was built by R. C. A.-Victor and donated by General Motors.

Following is the list of announcers who will be at the microphones: Bill Bivens, Lee Everett, Harold Gray, Larry Elliott, Warren Sweeney, Edwin A. Rogers, John Mayo, Paul Munroe, Jim McGrath, Gordon Hittenmark, Herluf Provensen, Bill Abernathy, Kenneth Youel, Louis Dean, Norvell Sharpe, James Young and Mr. Tiedemann.

Day of Recollection Set.

The Rev. Charles A. Dubray, of the Marist College, Brookland, D. C., will give a Day of Recollection at Nazareth Social Service Center, 200 I street northwest, tomorrow. The first conference will begin at 10:30 a. m., and the second will be at 2:30 p. m. The Holy Hour will be at 4:30 p. m.

Pentecost Sermon.

Observing the Day of Pentecost, the Rev. O. J. Randall, pastor of Potomac Heights Community Church, Cathedral avenue and Conduit road, will preach tomorrow morning on "The Birthday of the Bride of Christ." At 8 p. m., his subject will be "Christians Who Seldom Go to Church."

Lack of a Dollar Blocks His Romance

He said his name was "Smokey Joe." He wore a battered straw hat, and the shirt beneath his black face was white and clean, but tattered. That went for his suit and shoes and his apparel in general, which indicated the aged Negro had seen better days.

"Mister," said "Smokey Joe" to some of the bright young men who work at the District Supreme Court, "Mister, I got 95 cents, and I wants to borrow a nickel, so's I can get one of those marriage licenses."

The boys were kind to "Smokey" Joe," and one of them loaned him a nickel, but none of them mentioned the fact that marriage licenses cost $2, and not $1.

However, as he spread his change before the license clerk she broke the sad news.

"Smokey Joe" fled down the courthouse steps into the June sunlight—in quest of another dollar and romance!

Sidwell School Gives Diplomas To 18 Students

Honor Awards Made to 3; Swarthmore Dean Addresses Class.

Eighteen graduates of the Sidwell Friends School were awarded diplomas at commencement exercises last night in the school's suburban gymnasium.

M. E. Conclave Forces Clergy To Quit at 70

Large Majority Recorded for Retirement Rule in Conference Here.

All Methodist Episcopal clergymen in the Baltimore Conference who pass their seventieth birthday in the coming year will be compelled to resign from the ministry as the result of a resolution adopted yesterday morning in the ministers' executive session at the 151st annual meeting of the conference now in progress at Foundry Methodist Church.

Heretofore the clergymen, while eligible for retirement pension at the age of 65, could continue active work in the pulpit as long as they wished.

The resolution, which was adopted yesterday by a large majority vote after considerable debate, calls for all ministers to retire at the annual conference nearest their seventieth birthday. Several resignations will be forthcoming at the conference next year.

Pensions will continue to start at the age of 65 for those who wish to leave the ministry at that time.

While the ministers were holding their executive session the laymen of the Baltimore Conference opened their two-day meeting with 158 members in attendance. A session of the two groups was held in the afternoon and evening.

The lay conference reelected D. Stewart Patterson, member of the Brightwood Park Methodist Church, to the presidency and made him lay delegate to the general conference of Methodist Episcopal Churches next May in Columbus, Ohio.

Other officers elected by the lay conference were J. Harry Grace, of Baltimore, vice president; and Robert Young, of Oldtown, Md., treasurer. Clark Hobbs, of Baltimore, was reelected secretary.

Laymen Propose Changes.

The laymen voted to ask the next general conference to allow them more extensive participation in the annual conferences and to change the tenure of local lay delegates from one year to four years.

"The longer term will make for more aggressive leadership among the laymen," said Mr. Patterson in explaining the request for longer tenure.

In addition to Mr. Patterson three lay delegates as well as one ministerial delegate to the next general conference were elected yesterday. The lay delegates are Miss Lulu Hooper and George W. Crabbe, of Baltimore, and E. T. Dixon, of Cumberland, Md.

Both groups are privileged to send four representatives to the general conference. The ministers elected as their fourth delegate Dr. Frank Steelman, superintendent of the Frederick, Md., district. The three elected yesterday were Dr. Benjamin W. Meeks, of Washington, superintendent of the Washington district; Dr. F. R. Bayley, of Baltimore, superintendent of the East Baltimore district, and Dr. Harry W. Burgan, pastor of the Hamline Methodist Church, Washington.

Westminster Next Year.

Westminster, Md., seat of Western Maryland College of the Methodist Church, was selected for the meeting of the Baltimore conference next year.

Recreation Unit Renews Quest For a Director

Cincinnatian's Rejection of Offer Disappoints Committee Here.

Chagrined at the refusal of Tam Deering, public recreation supervisor of Cincinnati, to accept a similar position here, the District Recreation Committee met yesterday to review the list of applicants.

Deering, whom the committee selected after months of study, during which scores of names were considered, was prevailed upon to remain in Cincinnati by a salary increase and arguments of public officials and civic leaders. Here the newly created post of recreation coordinator will pay $5,500 to $6,000 per year, said Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the committee, which is below the figure Deering now receives.

Meeting in the office of Commissioner Gorge E. Allen, the District government's representative, the committee went over old applications and several new ones but failed to reach a decision. It was agreed to meet again next week, though no date was set.

Frederic A. Delano, nonvoting member, expressed disappointment that the Cincinnatian declined the offer, paying high tribute to his ability and accomplishments. The former interviewed Deering recently in the Ohio city.

Negotiations will be resumed immediately, said Settle, so that it is possible that a selection will be decided upon or announced at the next meeting. Other members of the committee are Henry I. Quinn, representing the Board of Education, and C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks.

U. S. Social Aim Given to Press By Roosevelt

Brief Definition Made on Spur of Moment in Response to Query.

On the spur of the moment, President Roosevelt, at his semiweekly press conference yesterday, gave a brief definition of the "social objective" of the New Deal. He did so well he agreed to lift the usual rule against quoting the President.

Mr. Roosevelt made the statement in reply to a question asked by Robert Cromie, editor of the Vancouver Sun, a pleasant, energetic Canadian journalist who is a visitor in the Capital and who attended the press conference. Mr. Cromie later said he had seen nothing recently in print regarding the Administration's social objective and thought it was a good time to have it restated.

The Canadian editor is a frequent visitor to Washington, where with a notebook always close at hand he makes a whirlwind survey of how the New Deal is progressing through interviewing various officials. On a previous occasion he has talked with the President.

"What would you say was the social objective of the Administration?" Mr. Cromie suddenly posed at the President's conference, creating an immediate silence.

The President jestingly inquired how that would help the Canadian elections and then added "that is a difficult subject to discuss, offhand." He said it would take an hour or two hours at the least to discuss it. For a moment he pondered the question and then continued:

"The social objective, I should say, remains just what it was, which is to do what any honest government of any country would do—to try to increase the security and the happiness of a larger number of people in all occupations of life and in all parts of the country; to give them more of the good things of life; to give them a greater distribution, not only of wealth in the narrow terms but of wealth in the wider terms; to give them places to go in the summer time—recreation; to give them assurance that they are not going to starve in their old age; to give honest business a chance to go ahead and make a reasonable profit, and to give everyone a chance to earn a living.

"It is a little difficult to define it, and I suppose this is a very offhand definition, but unless you go into a long discussion, it is hard to make it more definite. And I think, however, that we are getting somewhere toward our objective."

In response to requests by other newspapermen, the President agreed to permit the above statement to be directly quoted. At the same time, however, he again emphasized that the statement was given extemporaneously, was necessarily brief, and if amplified would require a detailed analysis of policies, aims and objectives of the Administration.

President Asks Congress Delay Carrier Unity

pipeline carriers the cheapest. Rail transportation for freight was rated in between these.

Rate Uniformity Advised.

The transportation coordinator recommended:

Concentration of all freight rate making and tariff publishing under a single agency which in time should evolve a uniform system of freight rates throughout the country.

Development of a scientific rate technique based on modern cost accounting methods instead of "the present arbitrary and confused processes."

Development of light-powered short train units.

Reduction of routes and restrictions of such routes to competitive carrier channels.

On Capitol Hill Chairman Sam Rayburn of the House Interstate Commerce Committee introduced a resolution providing for an investigation of the feasibility of drafting another railroad pension measure which would be valid in the face of the Supreme Court's recent decision.

The Rayburn resolution called for a commission of three Senators to be chosen by the Vice President, three House members to be selected by the Speaker and three persons to be appointed by the President.

This commission would be directed to report to Congress by March 1 after thoroughly investigating all pertinent facts for the purpose of determining whther a sound retirement and annuity system can be enacted for all railroads.

Counters Cummings Advice.

Mr. Rayburn proposed his resolution after Attorney General Homer S. Cummings advised against an attempt to draft another railroad retirement act at this session of Congress on the ground that the Supreme Court decision was of such "sweeping character" that it required detailed study.

Representative Robert Crosser (Democrat), of Ohio, co-author of the act, declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, however took the view that Congress should not spend its time investigating, but should pass another pension bill. He has a measure pending before the Rayburn committee which he holds meets all of the court's objections.

Wall Street Likes Views of President

By the United Press.

New York, June 7.—Wall Street tonight viewed President Roosevelt's transportation message with mild favor as a bit of aid for the railroad stocks, although its attitude was not shared by other groups, even the railroads themselves.

The railroad heads object to extension of the emergency railroad transportation act of 1933 as recommended by the President. The roads have their own fact-finding organization—the Association of American Railroads—which they consider able to cope with problems now assumed by the railroad coordinator.

The railroads, however, are in favor of the other points brought out in the message, namely, modification of the law for railroad reorganizations, regulation of air, highway and waterway traffic.

Little opposition was noted to regulation of buses as set forth in the bill which the President urged be passed. On the subject of truck regulation, however, there is considerable opposition, especially from farmers' organizations.

Among others opposed to that phase is the American Newspaper Publishers Association. Arguments advanced against regulation of trucks, as set forth in the pending bill, include the fact that a majority of the business is intrastate; second, that such legislation might bring freight rates on railroads and buses into line at a high level; and, third, that most of the trucks are operated by private concerns and are not common carriers.

Message on Transportation

The text of President Roosevelt's transportation message to Congress yesterday follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

It is high time to deal with the Nation's transportation as a single, unified problem.

For many years in the past transportation meant mainly railroads. But the rise of new forms of transportations, great expenditures of Government funds for the development of waterways and for the building of great highways and the development of invention within the railroad system itself, have enlarged the problem far beyond that conception which dominated most of our past legislation on the subject.

In some instances the Government has helped a little. In others it retarded. In still others it has given special assistance from time to time in many instances without rhyme or reason—in all instances without considering each aspect of the problem in the light of all the others.

Public's Side Neglected.

It is small wonder that in a transportation picture so confused, the public has been inadequately served.

I have from time to time, in this session, addressed the Congress as to the necessity of various forms of Government aid and regulation of transportation. I now wish to draw together and supplement these various suggestions for the consideration of the Congress in this session.

In the railroad field there has been a growing recognition of the necessity for reorganization and coordination. To that end there was created the office of Federal Coordinator of Transportation. The coordinator has considered various ways of effecting economies through the physical coordination of railway facilities and services, and, in addition, has studied and made suggestions for legislative measures covering both the railroads and other forms of transportation.

Another type of reorganization necessary for the sound and healthy recovery of our railroad system is financial. Many of our railroads are in a sound financial condition. Others are in need or reorganization.

Shortcomings in Law.

To enable necessary financial reorganizations to be effected inexpensively and promptly the Congress passed, two years ago, certain amendments to the Federal bankruptcy act. Shortcomings in this legislation have appeared which have prevented an efficient and extensive use of it.

In order to correct these shortcomings the coordinator has recommended certain amendments which are now before the Congress for action. Various differences of opinion as to these amendments are rapidly being adjusted and it is my hope that this legislation may be promptly enacted.

I have already recommended to the Congress my views with regard to the relations that should exist between the Federal Government and air carriers. Legislation has been introduced for the purpose of carrying out these recommendations.

I am in general accord with the substance of this legislation although I still maintain, as I indicated in my message on that subject, that a separate commission need not be established to effectuate the purposes of such legislation.

Air transportation should be brought into a proper relation to other forms of transportation by subjecting it to regulation by the same agency.

Recommends Motor Bill.

A bill for the regulation of highway motor carriers has passed the Senate and is now before the House of Representatives. The practical unanimity with which the Senate passed this bill convinces me of the extent to which all of the difficult adjustments among the interests concerned were made and I recommend its early passage by the House.

Another bill for the regulation of intercoastal and coastwise trade and of some of the inland waterway carriers prepared by the co-ordinator has been introduced and is before the Congress for action. I recommend that this bill be considered by the appropriate committees and pressed to early passage.

Reorganization Recommended.

I can see no reason why the responsibility for the regulation of intercoastal, coastwise and inland waterways should not be vested in the Interstate Commerce Commission, with proper provision for the departmentalizing of the work of the commission.

It is my hope that the Interstate Commerce Commission may, with the addition of the new duties that I have indicated, utilmately become a Federal Transportation Commission with comprehensive powers.

It had been my intention to recommend this strongly to this session of the Congress, but the time remaining seems to preclude the discussions necessary for such changes. Such a reorganization should not be delayed, however, beyond the second session of the Seventy-fourth Congress.

The efforts toward the co-ordination of the railroads and the general improvement of transportation conditions which were begun by the emergency railroad transportation act of 1933, should proceed, and I recommend that the act and the office of co-ordinator be extended for at least another year.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Virginia Launches Promotion Bureau

Development Group Opens Tourst Office Here.

By the Associated Press.

The Virginia Conservation and Development Commission today opened a tourist bureau in the National Capital.

The bureau, located in the lobby of the American Automobile Association, was opened here in the presence of Conservation Commissioner Wilbur C. Hall and J. A. Brown, Automobile Association business manager.

"We expect this bureau to increase Virginia's trade from a business of $75,000,000 annually to more than $100,000,000," Chairman Hall said.

Personnel for the bureau will be named probably late tomorrow, the State commissioner said. Meanwhile, the association is lending the State services of some of its employes.

Soviet Bluebeard Dies; Slayer of 20 Women

Kharkov, U. S. S. R., June 7 (AP).—A year of terror for the young women of Kharkov, during which 20 were murdered by a mysterious man, ended today with the execution of the confessed bluebeard, Ivan Stepanovich Maleshoff.

The man had been apprehended while calmly wiping the bloodstains of his latest victims from his clothing in a Kharkov hotel. He freely admitted the crimes.

Malesho, a graduate engineer, contended the murders were the result of a queer mental twist, but the court held this did not qualify him for insanity, which would have saved him from the death penalty.

New NRA Plan Voted in House; Richberg Quits

under voluntary "agreements" authorized in the original recovery law, but no antitrust laws may be suspended under such compacts.

But Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee, explaining their resolution to the House, insisted that antitrust laws may be suspended under voluntary trade agreements, so long as no monopolistic practice is authorized. Richberg took a similar position at an afternoon press conference.

No Compulsion.

"The only thing left in this act," said Representative Samuel B. Hill, of Washington, a ranking member of the committee, "will be Section 4(a) as to agreements and they are voluntary agreements.

"There is no compulsion left in the act or in the statute for their enforcement. Their enforcement will depend entirely upon the contractual agreements between the people who agree."

But, Hill insisted, and members of his committee agreed with him, when these "agreements" are approved by the President, they suspend so much of the anti-trust laws as are not in contradiction of other anti-monopoly provisions of the bill.

Protesting against the continuation of even that lingering remnant of a once potent NRA, Representative Maury Maverick (Democrat), Texas, moved that all authority to suspend anti-trust laws be stricken from the bill. His amendment was defeated 153 to 124, on a division count.

Test of Strength.

Similarly, Representative Thomas A. Jenkins (Republican), Ohio, moved to ban voluntary agreements from the bill along with codes. His amendment was crushed 177 to 72.

The major test of strength came on the minority motion to recommit the bill, offered by Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the committee. Treadway asked that the President's power to approve voluntary agreements be transferred to the Federal Trade Commission. Agreements, he provided, must include provisions against unfair methods of competition and monopolies and against child labor, and stipulate maximum hours, minimum wages, and the right to collective bargaining.

But the Treadway motion to recommit went the route of all other minority amendments. On a roll call vote, it was defeated 288 to 107, with the division again strictly on party lines.

Some Democrats in the Senate, however, notably Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, favor giving the Federal Trade Commission authority paralleling that in the Treadway motion, and more is expected to be heard from the proposal.

Furthermore, most of the Senate NRA antagonists are outspokenly opposed to any suspension of the anti-trust laws, even that left open by the House in the so-called voluntary agreements. Clark, in the framework of whose NRA resolution the House extension was written, forecast last night that no such suspension would ever pass the Senate.

Resignation of Richberg did not come as a surprise. The man who succeeded Gen. Hugh Johnson as NRA chieftain had suggested on several occasions, before and since the Supreme Court's decision, that he would leave the Blue Eagle in other hands "when the present act expires."

While the President has espoused a continuing NRA organization for statistical and other purposes, he gave no cue yesterday to the nature or executive personnel of the agency he plans to extend.

Richberg's letter of resignation to the President, under date of June 5, read:

President's Letter.

"In line with several conversations which we have had upon the subject in recent months, I am herewith tendering my resignation as chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board (and as general counsel, NRA) to take effect upon the expiration of the present national recovery act on June 16, 1935.

"I appreciate deeply the opportunities to serve in your Administration and the evidences of confidence which you have generously given me.

"May I take the liberty of adding to an expression of faith in the extraordinary value of your public service a reference to the affectionate regard which you inspire in those who have the privilege of working with you? I shall have a continuing regret in the loss of that association."

The President's letter of acceptance bore yesterday's date.

"My dear Donald," it read.

"I scarcely need to tell you of my great regret, both personal and official, that I must at last, with great reluctance, accept your resignation.

"You have given unselfishly of your time and energy during this critical period in our history and, because I know of the personal considerations which make it necessary for you to return to private life, I can no longer ask you to stay in Washington.

Varied Reaction.

"You carry with you my affectionate regard and, as I have told you, I know that I can count on your service and help in the future.

"I hope that the Senate resolution in amended form will have passed before June 16. I shall want to talk to you in regard to the administrative set-up after that date and I hope that you will be willing to stay in Washington for a short period after June 16, in order to transfer, as effectively as possible, your duties as chairman to the succeeding administration."

The Capitol received news of Richberg's departure with mingled feelings. Most Blue Eagle opponents have criticized his activity in behalf of NRA extension, particularly in intrastate fields, and the Supreme Court's recent invalidation of the law brought a deluge of critical shafts from Republicans. Congressional leaders, however, expressed keen regret yesterday when they heard of his resignation.

An expression by Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, was typical.

"He is intelligent, courageous and the fairest-minded man I have dealt with in Washington."

Labor has been bitter toward Richberg, a former labor lawyer and chief legal adviser to the railroad brotherhoods, ever since extension of the automobile code under terms labor leaders insisted "betrayed" them.

On the floor of the House yesterday Chairman William P. Connery, of the House Labor Committee, hurled the charge:

"Richberg duoble-crossed labor."

Richberg rode to New Deal eminence as the star of Gen. Johnson declined, and reached heights of authority that led to the about-town title, "Assistant President."

Anti-Trust Disagreement.

NRA counsel under Johnson, he became chairman of the President's National Emergency Council and succeeded S. Clay Williams when the latter resigned as chairman of the NIRB. Later he relinquished his emergency council post to Frank Walker. Confident the Supreme Court would uphold NRA, he became a special Assistant Attorney General long enough to argue the Schechter case before the court.

Since the court's adverse decision it has been only a matter of time until he would follow the trail of Raymond Moley and Hugh Johnson back into private life.

Disagreement over application of anti-trust laws under voluntary trade agreements permitted in the Administration NRA resolution centered about the following recovery act clause:

"Section 5. While this title is in effect * * * and for 60 days thereafter, any code, agreement, or license approved, prescribed, or issued and in effect under this title, and any action complying with the provisions thereof taken during such period, shall be exempt from the provisions of the anti-trust laws of the United States."

Richberg, and Democratic members of the House, yesterday insisted that this provision will continue in force so far as voluntary agreements are concerned.

Roosevelt's View.

Reporters, however, understood President Roosevelt yesterday to take a contrary view. The President said he did not want to be interpreted as not favoring voluntary agreements, so long as they did not run counter to statute law. He said a great many things can be done voluntarily if they do not violate the anti-trust laws. On the other hand, he insisted he could not waive the law by approval of agreements which violate the anti-trust statutes.

Insistence of congressional Democrat leaders that voluntary agreements still authorized involve a measure of anti-trust law suspension brought a tattoo of protests from the Republican side of the aisle.

"Is there anyone here who believes the Supreme Court would have upheld a law saying, 'The President is hereby vested with discretionary authority to exempt any corporation or group of corporations from operation of the anti-trust laws'?" asked Representative John B. Hollister (Republican), of Ohio.

Others charged Ways and Means committeemen with failure to present an exact picture of what the continuing NRA organization will look like.

"In order to know what the law is," said Representative Earl C. Michener (Republican), of Michigan, "it is necessary to take the Supreme Court decision and superimpose it on the statute as originally drawn, and then, if you are a good lawyer and make no mistakes, you will know what is in and what is out."

Sees "Sinister" Motives.

Representative Jenkins was angrily challenged by Doughton when he charged there were "sinister" motives underlying the bill. The Ohioan absolved the House committee of the charge, but flung it again at the White House and Richberg.

In the heat of bitter debate, while Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, was heatedly discussing anti-NRA statistics presented by his Republican colleagues, the fantastic figure of a man carrying a white handkerchief tied to a stick burst past doorkeepers and paraded down the center aisle of the House.

Shouts of "White flag!" went up on the Republican side, amid general laughter. The man, who was led off the floor by a House attendant, later gave his name as H. G. Franklin, of Sugar Run, Pa.

Among the amendments quickly voted down in the rush toward passage of the resolution was a proposal by Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, to give NRA employes all of their accrued leave with pay prior to severance from the organization.

Although this was defeated, 118 to 102, it was said the House action does not preclude NRA officials from giving workers earned leave with pay, particularly if the Comptroller General so rules.

Salary Curb Defeated.

Another amendment, by Representative Walter G. Andrews (Republican), New York, to limit NRA official salaries to a $8,000 maximum was defeated, 192 to 71.

Besides extending what's left of the NRA organization to April 1, 1936, the resolution subsequently adopted by the House specifically repealed recovery act provisions "delegating power to the President to approve or prescribe codes of fair competition and providing for the enforcement of such codes."

The NRA resolution carried no provision for extending the life of the Federal Alcohol Control Administration, established under NRA sanction. The plan is to rush through a separate measure, if possible, before NRA expires June 16.

A draft of the FACA bill reputedly approved by the President was in the hands of Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee yesterday. But Doughton said he has ordered no hearings and does not intend to until he has thoroughly studied the measure. He said the committee will work out its own bill.

While the House debate raged, Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, Democratic whip, rose in the Senate to defend the President's conduct in the face of the Supreme Court's code invalidation. Lewis insisted the President could have continued the codes, although the court had prevented enforcement by fine and imprisonment.

employed, but most of those who oppose the national recovery act and who rejoice over the Supreme Court's decision are unrelenting in their opposition to the enactment of the bill into law."

Flatly Against President.

Flatly rejecting President Roosevelt's plan for a skeleton NRA, Green advocated the licensing of businesses in interstate commerce through a Federal incorporation law, and the adoption of a constitutional amendment giving the Federal Government power to enact and enforce industrial and social legislation.

Green declared that the majority of employers wish to maintain decent standards, but declared that since a minority of employers "are enemies of a decent social order, it is necessary that they be compelled by law to conform to sound business principles, pay decent wages and maintain reasonable hours of employment. They will not do this willingly. They know only force and compulsion."

Green appealed to all of the friends of NRA to get behind the labor movement for a new law, a bill for which, he said, will soon be introduced.

The federation president rejected the idea of voluntary codes or of State agreements as unworkable and contended that the only solution lay in enactment by Congress of new legislation.

Besides NRA and 30-hour legislation, Green pled for enactment of the Wagner disputes bill, of social security legislation, and of the Guffey coal bill.

Textile Men Object.

Meanwhile, the Cotton Textile Institute, Inc., took exception to a statement of the American Federation of Labor that hours had been lengthened and wages reduced in in the textile industry.

Goldthwaite H. Dorr, president of the institute, said that if the federation meant to include cotton textile manufacturers, "we must emphatically take issue with the statement."

He said that, with a few unimportant exceptions, the 1,500 mills in the cotton textile industry have adhered to code provisions since the Supreme Court ruling.

While the federation was fighting for new legislation, the United Mine Workers of America continued to prepare for the greatest show of strength in years with a strike of 450,000 workers called for a week from next Monday.

Ships Stand by Cordova As She Anchors Safely

Victoria, British Columbia, June 7 (AP).—The Alaska Steamship Co. freighter Cordova, which sent a distress signal early today as she steamed through Seymour Narrows, south of here, anchored safely tonight in Duncan Bay.

Advices were received here that several craft were standing by the Cordova, believed to have struck a reef in the Narrows. She was taking water after her tail shaft was broken.

The stricken vessel was picked up by the tug Island Comet and towed to safe anchorage. She will proceed to Seattle for repairs, and her 96 passengers probably will be transferred to another ship.

Leland Women Propose a Vote On Future War

Democratci Club Sends Letter to Rep. Lewis and to Tydings.

The Woman's Democratic Club of Leland Thursday night voted to send letters urging Representative David J. Lewis and Senator Millard E. Tydings to sponsor congressional action which would make United States entrance into a future war impossible without popular consent.

The motion to send these letters, which was made by Miss Pauline Hutchinson, was adopted by unanimous vote of the club. Under the proposed plan, a popular referendum would be the determining factor in declaration of war, regardless of the opinions of the President or of Congress.

The club hopes that other civic organizations will fall behind the plan and thus force it to the attention of Congress, according to Mrs. John H. Werner, retiring president of the club.

Meantime, the Democratic club will continue its study of county government, with Mrs. John A. Overholt scheduled to give the next talk, "County Health Departments," which will be at the August meeting, under a newly-adopted plan of bi-monthly instead of quarterly meetings.

Benjamin Thorn, assistant director of the finance division of PWA, gave an illustrated lecture on the progress of public works projects in Maryland, with special emphasis on future projects. His talk was followed by an open forum.

New officers elected for next year are Miss Olivia Knight, president; Mrs. John H. Werner, honorary vice president; Mrs. C. T. Johnson, vice president; Mrs. Herbert Ehrman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. R. Greist, recording secretary; Mrs. P. J. Fischer, treasurer, and Mrs. W. E. Aid of West Virginia Group Sought for Holders of Foreign Securities.

By the Associated Press.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., June 7.—Help for a corporation trying to "bail out the suckers" who bought foreign bonds after the World War was asked of the West Virginia Bankers Association today.

"The sucker in this case is the national wealth of the United States," the financiers in their annual convention were told by Francis White, of New York, vice president and secretary of the Foreign Bondholders Protective Council, Inc.

"In the little more than a decade between the termination of the World War and the commencement of major defaults on the dollar bonds of foreign governments issued in the United States, about $10,500,000,000 of the national wealth of the United States went abroad from this country in the form of the dollar bonds of foreign governments," said White, former United States Minister to Czechoslovakia.

The bonds were floated, he said, without American investors having any organization to advise them as to the wisdom of putting their money into them.

"At the present time about $6,000,000,000 of these loans are still outstanding, and nearly $2,000,000,000 thereof are in default. At the present time there are approximately $200,000,000 of interest and sinking fund past due and unpaid."

"In at least 95 per cent of West Virginia business is good," declared another speaker, J. A. Sydenstricker, of Marlinton, president of the State Bankers Association, in his annual address.

Executive Body Acts to Dissolve Choral Society

Interest of Members and Public Held Not Sufficient.

Dissolution of the Washington Choral Society was voted at a meeting of the executive board last Thursday evening, it having been decided that the interest shown by the public and by the members was not sufficient to justify continuance of the organization at a loss. The officers at the meeting were Myron W. Whitney, president; Clarence Aspinwall, Clarence Phelps Dodge, Mrs. Joseph M. Stoddard and Grace Dunham Guest, vice presidents, and Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, secretary and assistant treasurer.

The society was the outgrowth of a chorus organized late in 1926 by the District of Columbia Federation of Music Clubs under the presidency of Esther Linkins. William Braithwaite was named chairman, and the first concert was given May 18, 1927, with Dr. John Finley Williamson as guest conductor. Daniel Protheroe conducted the next concert, given May 8, 1928, under the auspices of the Washington Church Council, and in May of the following year Frederick Alexander was guest conductor of a massed choral concert.

Formal organization under the name of the Washington Choral Festival Association was effected in 1929, with H. Barrett Learned as president, Mrs. Joseph M. Stoddard and Grace Dunham Guest as vice presidents, and Mrs. Gertrude Lyons as secretary-assistant treasurer. Plans for a concert in Constitution Hall were abandoned because of insufficient preparation, and an hour of choral music was presented in the Church of the Epiphany on May 10, 1930. In May of the following year a similar program was given in the same church, with Louis A. Potter as conductor.

After the death of Mr. Learned, Myron W. Whitney was asked to accept the presidency, and the name of the organization was changed to the Washington Choral Society. In 1932 the society made three appearances with the National Symphony Orchestra—on March 6 and 17, and December 11.

On May 16, 1933, and May 17, 1934, Mr. Potter conducted concerts in which the chorus was assisted by a chamber orchestra from the National Symphony, and during Christmas week of both those years candlelight services were given in the Church of the Epiphany.

The chorus sang Christmas carols in the east room of the White House on Christmas Eve in 1933. On February 28, 1935, the society sang Deems Taylor's "The Chambered Nautilus," with the National Symphony, in an all-American program conducted by Dr. Hans Kindler. The last concert of the society was given on May 21 of this year in Roosevelt auditorium.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 7.—An indictment charging mail fraud and conspiracy was returned today by the Federal grand jury against the New York Title & Mortgage Co., six of its officers and five of its subsidiary corporations.

Walter T. Brower, special assistant to the attorney general in charge of investigation of the company's affairs, said the case involves the largest amount of securities ever disposed of dircetly to the public.

The men named in the indictment are Harry A. Kahler, chairman of the board; George T. Mortimer, president of the company; H. Pushae Williams, general manager; Herbert F. Breitwieser, vice president in charge of the mortgage department; Cyril H. Burdett, senior vice president, and Joseph C. Shields, vice president in charge of sales.

Amelia Earhart Welcomed Home

Huge Throng Greet Flier at Atchison, Kans.

By the Associated Press.

Atchison, Kans., June 7.—Amelia Earhart came home today, and some said the folks yelled almost loud enough for Ed Howe to hear in Baltimore.

The ocean-flying blonde, who has vowed to macth every aviation record of man, drew crowds such as those which swarmed into town on holidays back in the years when Howe was editor of the Globe.

The mile-long parade in her honro stirred memroies of the old corn carnival processions, which were introduced by Howe, the "Sage of Potato Hill," now recuperating from an eye operation in the East.

Waving to the crowds pressing toward her, Miss Earhart rode in a flower-decked airplane float the city firemen built. Behind her rolled other floats, some representing six weeks of painstaking work.

Tonight, in Memorial Hall, she told the crowds of her flights.

Floods' Damage Is $41,000,000; Rivers Falling

Four States Count Losses as Fear of New Dangers Fades.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 7.—Apparently at its peak within inches of the 1903 high-water record, the flooding Missouri River poured into the Mississippi here tonight while four States cast about the water-wrought havoc for an adequate damage estimate.

With the flood loss in Colorado, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri unofficially estimated as high as $41,000,000, Government officials awaited more comprehensive checks before making public their figures. The report may be delayed for weeks.

Meantime the Missouri, which for days spread across a 5-mile basin along stretches of its valley, was falling in the western section of the State, and remained stationary at the outlet, where inundation was most severe. Roscoe Nunn, Government forecaster, said there was no danger of a major flood on the Mississippi.

The flood crest of the Kaw spilled itself into the Missouri at Kansas City today, but forecasters said any rise from that inflow would be dissipated before the water reached the fertile St. Louis-St. Charles Counties Valley, already submerged.

Unofficial damage estimates placed the loss in Misouri at $15,000,000, where floods coursed over 780 square miles of farm land; $13,000,000 in Nebraska, $10,000,000 in Colorado, and $5,000,0 in Kansas. The Red Cross said its refugee list, in excess of 4.00 families, probably was at its peak and turned to the serious business of feeding and housing the flood victims.

The crest of the Mississippi today wat at Alton, Ill., slightly north of St. Louis, where the river had backed up into a few houses. Here the big river stood 3 feet above designated flood stage, but there was no danger.

Repair crews began work on damaged highways, bridges and railroad lines ni Kansas and western Missouri today, but the region at the Missouri's mouth remained deserted as the flood, unhampered by levees, submerged rich fields where two weeks ago a bumper wheat and corn crop was in prospect.

The last of half a score of key levees that ran from the river's mouth upstream for 46 miles, was washed away today as the flood emerged victorious in a battle with volunteer dike guards that had been in progress four days. As the guards fled to safwety the muddy waters spilled over an additional 3,500 acres.

As the Red Cross headquarters here made arrangements to parcel out a $100,000 flood relief appropriation for the four water-soaked States, it cast up the the following figures: Loss 124 lives, injury of 72 persons, destruction of 536 homes, damage to 22,423 other homes, 4,293 families affected by the floods.

month-long job for 25,000 men and women was seen tonight in the task of "cleaning up Kansas" after the most disastrous flood in years.

As High waters receded, John G. Stutz, executive director of the State emergency work relief committee, said that number—half of the State's relief workers—would be needed for at least 30 days.

Damage estimates ranged from $5,000,000 downward to highways, crops and property generally.

SEC Hears Plans For Big Bond Sale

By the Associated Press.

Plans for a new $30,000,000 bond issue were put before the securities commission yesterday by the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., of San Francisco.

The company's first issue, about two months ago, was called by the commission a strong indication that private industry was moving to take advantage of the reservoir of funds looking for investment.

Following that issue there has been a steady stream of new securities, mostly for refunding purposes.

The new Pacific Gas issue would bear 4 per cent interest and is for refunding outstanding issues bearing a higher interset. The first issue, for $45,000,000 also bore 4 per cent.

House Probers Of Super Lobby Comb Records

Two Truckloads of Files of Chain-Store Group Are Seized.

By the Associated Press.

With two truckloads of records taken under subpena from one chain store association to start on, the House "super lobby" investigating committee yesterday waded into an inquiry that gave indication of ranging from charges of lobbying to cut-rate buying and selling.

After hearing officials of the newly formed American Retail Federation, Inc., which it started out to investigate, deny any intention of furthering chain interests against those of independent merchants, the committee recessed its hearirgs to work on files of the Food, Drug and Grocery Chain Stores of America, Inc. The stacks of files were seized in the organization's offices in the National Press Building by a member of the House sergeant at arms staff Wednesday, it was revealed yesterday.

Chairman Patman (Democrat), Texas, said he had had four committee investigators going through these files, but declined to disclose what had been found.

The decision to subpena the chain store association's records was made at the outset of this week's opening hearings after John A. Logan, executive secretary and manager of the Washington office, had insisted the committee's representative specify what files were wanted before he would hand them over.

Patman said yesterday that under the amended House resolution authorizing the committee to go into whatever practices of retailers and wholesalers it believed necessary.

"We have broader powers than even the Federal Trade Commission." Asked how far the committee would go, he said, "just as far as is necessary."

"We have ten days to go through all these records, Patman said, "and at the end of our search we hope to disclose to the American people that the American Retail Federation, which recently opened offices in Washington, with Col. C. O. Sherrill, a former White House aid, as managing director, intended to set up a super-lobby in Washington."

The offices in the Press Building from which the papers were seized is in close proximity to the offices set up by Col. Sherrill for the federation.

Patman also said he was drafting a bill to prohibit rebates from manufacturers to chainstore buyers that are not given also to independent and other buyers, on grounds that such practices are discriminatory.

Guard Doubled Over England's Rome Embassy

Italian Papers Bitter on British Attitude in Ethiopia Crisis.

Rome, June 7.—A greatly increased guard was set about the British embassy today, as the Italian press, reveling in the "lid off" order it received this week, continued its bitter attack on England's opposition to Italy's African policies.

(In London, Capt. Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal, told the House of Commons that Italian newspaper charges that Britain was encouraging Ethiopian hostility against Italy were "mischievously absurd." The British legislators cheered loudly as Clement Richard Atlee, deputy leader of the opposition, declared Italy "ought to be told plainly that she would not have the use of the Suez Canal" if she intended to use force against Ethiopia.)

Where two members of the carbinier (national police) ordinarily are assigned to embassies, five uniformed guards appeared at the British mission today and plain-clothesmen scouting in the vicinity carefully inspected all persons approaching.

Front-page editorials lashed out again at the British attitude in the Italo-Ethiopian controversy, which was said to have influenced Premier Benito Mussolini to accept arbitration after he had consistently rejected it. The editorials continued despite the seizure of yesterday's edition of the newspaper Ottobre, which openly talked of war between the two European nations.

At Milan, meanwhile, the Italo-Ethiopian Conciliation Commission adjourned until June 25 to meet again in Scheweningen, the Netherlands. The commission's meeting today was to list documents needed for its consideration.

Efforts of Ethiopia's representatives—Albert de la Pradelle, of France, and Dr. Pitman Benjamin Potter, of the United States—to broaden the scope of the commission's work failed, the Italians insisting it confine itself to discussing the clash at Ualual last December in which 30 Italians and 110 Ethiopians were reported killed.

(Eden, in his statement to the British Commons, said he regretted the "wild accusations" against Great Britain in the Italian press, and termed "fantastic" assertions that his nation wanted a protectorate over Ethiopia.

("Nothing could better please the British government," he declared, "than a peaceful and lasting settlement of the dispute and the restoration of friendly relations between the two countries.")

Italo-British relations will be discussed shortly by Premier Mussolini and his ambassador to London, Dino Grandi, who arrived at Bologna today to visit his family before reporting to Mussolini here.

Police Hunt Child Feared Kidnaped

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Johnny Kaul, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Kaul, who has been missing from home in New York since Thursday.

Police Fear Abduction, Push Search for Boy, 5, in New York was abducted or the victim of foul play. They inclined to the belief that he was drowned in the nearby East River.

"The boy was always well dressed and he played in the park with the children from the wealthy homes in the district," said John F. Kaul, a World War veteran and father of the vanished child.

"I'm afraid he has been picked up by kidnapers who think he belongs in one of their homes."

While the distraught mother's plea to his "kidnapers" for his return was broadcast, police searched the neighborhood for persons of questionable character and the marine division futilely dragged the river in the vicinity of the playground.

As the search continued, the mother announced that agents of the Department of Justice had questioned her and were investigating the case.

Coast Kidnapers Appear Scattered

By the Associated Press.

Tacoma, Wash., June 7.—Signs the George Weyerhaeuser kidnapers had scattered to evade capture appeared today in remarks of a Justice Department spokesman and in the widening geographical scope of the investigation.

An airplane search for the "two-gabled" house where George was held was disclosed as police speeded up their widening hunt for the abductors.

Covers 10-Mile Area.

"Percy Minnie" was the code signal which the abductors instructed the boys' parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Weyerhaeuser, jr., to use in newspaper advertisements.

Presence of a woman in the gang had been indicated after the abduction victim told Federal agents he heard a "woman who laughed" in the kidnaper's lair.

A source close to the investigation said a 10-mile area in King County was being covered by airplane to find the kidnapers' house.

A radio alarm sent Louisville, Ky., police on the hunt for an automobile believed driven by one of the suspects after he had attempted to obtain license plates for the car there. But when police found the man he convinced them he was a United States Army engineer from Fort Peck, Mont. His name was not disclosed.

Portland (Oreg.) police announced the detention of Pat K. Kelley, who they said was sought for questioning in the case.

Justice agents looked over police photographs in San Francisco after Police Inspector Fred Butz said he had been informed two suspects, Jack Bailey and Harold McAtee, had been seen there recently.

Sheriff Warren D. Rapp, of Sandpoint, Idaho, said a prisoner there had told him Bailey and Herbert Lester Johnstone, another suspect, had been seen between Spokane, Wash., and Missoula, Mont., last Monday. One of the $200,000 in ransom bills was passed at the Spokane postoffice last Tuesday.

"There is nothing to indicate," said the Justice Department spokesman here, "that the search will be concentrated here for a long time."

The spokesman would not enlarge upon this, but in Washington, D. C., J. Edgar Hoover, head of the department's Bureau of Investigation, said the kidnaper hunt was being "directed from here."

Hoover declined to comment on the arrival here of his assistant, Harold Nathan.

License Plates Checked.

Potential clews extended even to Coldwater, Mich., where two Washington State license plates, regarded as possibly having been used by one of the abductors, were forwarded to Tacoma.

John Keegan, captain of the Portland, Oreg., detective bureau, who previously had named six men as suspects, among them Bailey, McAtee and Johnstone, said Federal agents wanted Kelly for questioning.

Kelly, however, was not one of the six named by Keegan as suspects and arresting officers said he "got a big laugh when told Federal men were after him."

Agents here declined to say whether they were interested in talking to Kelly.

Rich Cuban's Lawyer Held in Kidnap Quiz

By the Associated Press.

Havana, June 7.—Antonio San Miguel's lawyer, Pedro Herrera Sotolongo, was detained for questioning today as heavy forces of police and soldiers pursued kidnapers of the 78-year-old multimillionaire.

The police and army detachment were ordered concentrated in the Santos Suarez suburb, near San Miguel's home. Authorities said they expected an encounter with the kidnap band.

Shortly before his arrest, Herrera Sotolongo had announced his inability to contact the kidnapers, believed to number nine, to pay the $286,000 ransom demanded for San Miguel's release.

The aged former senator, former newspaper publisher and rail magnate was seized day before yesterday, together with four servants, Simon Arleta, his valet, was released to bring word of the kidnapers' ransom demands. He was jailed, as was Arturo Mujica, who police said sold the mango cart which five of the kidnapers used to cover their presence at the kidnaping scene.

After efforts to pay the ransom last night failed, Herrera Sotolongo and other business associates of the kidnaped man asked President Carlos Mendieta to have police withdraw from the case until San Miguel and the others were released.

Earlier today Herrera Sotolongo expressed misgivings lest San Miguel, "a pretty thrifty old gentleman," raise "a real fuss" if the huge ransom—the second largest in the history of the modern snatch racket—were paid without his consent.

Davis Gets Life Term In Bremer Kidnaping

By the United Press.

St. Paul, June 7.—Volney Davis, Edward G. Bremer kidnaper, captured last week in Chicago, today was sentenced to life imprisonment as he and four others implicated in the $200,000 abduction were brought into Federal Court for sentence. He pleaded guilty.

Sentence was pronounced by Judge M. M. Joyce, who presided at the trial at which Arthur (Doc) Barker and four others were convicted.

John J. (Boss) McLaughlin, chief money changer in the kidnaping and former Illinois political power, was sentenced to five years.

Harold Alberton, who arranged the hideout at Bensenville, Ill., where Bremer was held captive 22 days while ransom negotiations were being conducted, was sentenced to 20 years.

Elmer Farmer, who aided Alberton in hideout preparations and pleaded guilty, likewise was sentenced to 20 years.

James J. Wilson, chauffeur for Dr. John P. Moran and also a money changer, was sentenced to five years.

Davis, McLaughlin, Alberton and Farmer will serve their terms in Leavenworth Prison. Wilson was ordered to the Federal reformatory at Chillicothe, Ohio.

The life sentence for Davis was the third such punishment imposed as result of the kidnaping. Barker and Oliver Berg were sentenced to life immediately after conviction. Barker is at Leavenworth and Berg at Joliet (Ill.) Penitentiary, where he was serving a previous life term.

God as Creative Force Is Topic of Scientists

"God the Only Cause and Creator" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Acts 15:18: "Known unto God are all His works from the beginning of the world."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth thee." The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science Text Book, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "We must reverse our feeble flutterings—our efforts to find life and truth in matter—and rise above the testimony senses, above the mortal to the immortal idea of God."

Japanese Win More Demands In North China

with fresh orders from the war office.

Forces Total 1,300.

The Japanese troops at present in Tientsin total 1,030 men, mostly infantry companies, and 300 at Peiping, 90 miles inland.

Following a conference with leading Japanese officers, Gen. Umezu said the problem in the north may appear to be a local one, but that "in order to remove the root-cause, we must deal with China as a whole."

Advices from Japanese sources at Hankow, in central China, said Vice Admiral Hyakutake, commanding the Japanese Kangtze River patrol, had hurried by airplane to Chengtu to confer with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, "strong man" of China, on the Peiping-Tientsin situation, at Chiang's request. The generalissimo was believed to have asked for mediation and a speedy settlement.

This coincided with the Japanese attitude, as summed up in a statement by the military here. It said:

"Japan desires to purify the atmosphere in North China and make it mre pleasant. * * * If the Chinese show reluctance to fulfill our demands, we will be obliged to take whatever steps that we may deem effective and appropriate."

Orders Army to Leave.

Gen. Yu Hsueh-Chung, ousted Chinese governor of Hopei Province here, departing at the insistence of the Japanese, ordered his Fifty-first Army to evacuate the Tientsin area and railway zone and depart for an unannounced destination. The troops, totaling 50,000 men, mostly old Manchurian soldiers driven from the north in 1931, possibly will follow Yu to his new headquarters on the Szechuen-Kansu border, in the northwest, where Nanking has given the general a post as bandit suppression chief in that remote zone.

The new governor, acceptable to Tokyo, Chang Hou-Wan, is at Paoting-Fu, south of Peiping. He is due in Tientsin on Sunday.

Japanese troops went about fumigating and cleaning warehouses and old buildings near their barracks this morning, to house the additional troops.

Japanese Demands Met by Nanking

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), June 8.—The prospects of hostilities in north China apparently were reduced considerably today by the readiness with which Nanking, in order to preserve peace, has acceded to the most important of Tokyo's demands.

Observers here consider this extremely conciliatory policy will establish a unique example in Chinese-Japanese relations.

It was believed the substitution of Chinese officials with men acceptable to Japan and the withdrawal of the old Manchurian army in the Pieping-Tientsin area, now under way, will go far toward a settlement.

The Hopei provincial capital also is being removed from Tientsin to Paoting-Fu, 100 miles southwest of Peiping, on the railroad. This is the second move in recent years. Peiping formerly was the national and provincial capital of the north.

The Chinese feel, in view of their conciliatory moves, that Japan now hardly can justify drastic action—but none would be surprised at any policies or statements emanating from the Japanese military.

Foreigners are asking where the Japanese will call a halt, but the answer still is far from apparent. It is considered in Shanghai that Nanking's preoccupation with Chinese communist activities combined with the absorption of the Western powers with their own problems renders effective opposition unlikely.

fered to discuss new settlement of the problem.

This was taken to indicate there would be no great changes in British foreign policies under Baldwin's leadership.

After returning from his audience at the palace to No. 10 Downing street to receive his new post from Baldwin, MacDonald issued an explanation of his withdrawal in which he emphasized the necessity for continuance of the cooperative efforts of the three government parties.

"Such a cabinet is still required if national progress is to be maintained," he declared, "and the problems, both domestic and foreign, with which we are beset are to be surmounted."

The veteran Scot made it clear his resignation "has nothing to do with matters of opinion or policy."

"I gladly responded, however, to the desire of my colleagues that I remain with them and give them help which, though less exacting, will still be whole-hearted," he said. "and I hope that the confidence and support the country has given me and the national combination of which I have been the head will be renewed to the same combination under its new prime minister."

Praising the cooperation given him, MacDonald said:

"I presided over a cabinet diverse in general political principles as few cabinets have been, and yet united in the practical work of fulfilling our common national task as few cabinets, even those drawn from a single party, have been."

MacDonald, the weight of the premiership off his shoulders and the day's historic event behind him, bade farewell to his cabinet associates and friends and left for Scotland at 7:30 p. m.

Woman Killed in Factory Blast Was Working in Sister's Place

By the Associated Press.

Elkton, Md., June 7.—Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Cecelia McNabb, who was killed Tuesday in a fireworks factory explosion.

It was learned at the services that Mrs. McNabb did not usually work in the building where the explosion occurred. She was substituting Tuesday for her sister, Mrs. Roy Carpenter.

Three other women employes of the factory still are in the hospital here for treatment to injuries suffered in the explosion. Of the three, Mrs. Laura Simmons is the worst injured. For a time it was feared that she might not live but she has regained consciousness. Mrs. Simmons suffered a fractured skull and other injuries.

Services for Mrs. McNabb were conducted at Trinity Episcopal Church here by the Rev. Dr. J. Warren Albinson, the rector, and burial was in St. Mary's Episcopal Cemetery at North East. Members of the Chesapeake City Lodge, Daughters of America, of which Mrs. McNabb was a member, conducted services at the grave.

Both fireworks factories here closed for the afternoon and employes attended the funeral in a body.

State's Attorney E. D. E. Rollins has announced that he will conduct an investigation into the explosion, in which more than 15 persons were hurt.

F.F.E. President Turns Critical Of Politicians

Steward Speaks of 'Small Caliber' Men Opposing Service Extension.

Criticism of those "small-caliber politicians" who stand in the way of extension of the civil service system was voiced yesterday by Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes. He spoke before the Washington chapter of the Unitarian Laymen's League in All Souls Church.

Emphasizing the vital functions carried on by Federal employes and the need of maintaining and extending the merit principle, Mr. Steward said:

"The vast army of civilian employes who, come day go day, regardless of the political control of this Government, must be depended on to carry on the multifarious activities of our Federal Government, must furnish all of the things that the American people will continue to demand from this Government * * * You are getting an improved public service, sometimes because of, sometimes in spite of, those who are in control of the United States."

Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, expressed his complete support of the merit principle in public employment. Miss Gertrude M. McNally, secretary-treasurer of the Federation of Federal Employes, also was present.

A Fit Of Temper.

The hysterical attack of the Italian press on Great Britain must be listed as an encouraging sign for the preservation of peace in Africa. There has been much fear that the powers dominant in the League of Nations would stand aside and let Mussolini discipline the Abyssinians in any way that he might consider advantageous. But the outcry of the Black Shirt press now clearly indicates the magnitude of the obstacles placed in his way.

One Fascist organ, The Ottobre, so completely lost its head as to suggest bombardment of Malta to bring Britain "to her senses." For that irresponsible outburst Thursday's issue of the paper was seized and a stern official warning sent to the editor. But in much of the government-controlled press the fulminations against Great Britain are nearly as outspoken and hostile. The Giornale D'Italia makes the far-fetched assertion that the British are annoyed at Mussolini's intervention in Ethiopia because they themselves wish to dominate and possibly annex part of the East African state.

The Government at Rome realizes, of course, that it would be extremely dangerous to undertake an active campaign against Ethiopia in the face of strong British opposition. Should the Suez Canal be closed to Italian transports, the Fascist army on the Abyssinian "front" would be caught in a trap. A single glance at a map of the Mediterranean and Northeastern Africa is sufficient to explain the excitement of the Italian editors and the significance of Britain's restraining influence. No doubt Mussolini is just as perturbed as his editors over this impediment to Italian aggression in East Africa. But diplomacy demands more discreet reactions than those manifest in the press.

Hasty Conclusions.

Representative Ellenbogen encountered no difficulty in proving the existence of a housing shortage in Washington. Federal employes in the District, he points out in a report favoring enactment of his rental control bill, have increased more than 50 per cent in the last two years. During the same period—until recent months—building has been sluggish. The need for more adequate housing facilities can scarcely be questioned.

From this premise Mr. Ellenbogen takes a long leap to the conclusion that Congress should declare the existence of an emergency and set up a commission to "determine and fix a schedule of fair and reasonable rates" for hotels, apartments and other rental property. Between the premise and the conclusion is a wide field of relevant considerations which seem to have been lightly passed over. Mr. Ellenbogen assumes, for example, that the number of Government employes in Washington will "continue to increase as it has for the last two years." Already officials are wondering how they can replace NRA employes who will be cast off by the skeletonizing process. With the passing of the emergency which brought numerous temporary organizations into existence, a gradual reduction in the employes of emergency agencies should soon be under way.

Moreover, Mr. Ellenbogen seeks to bolster up his argument by this really startling statement:

> It also must be kept in mind that thousands upon thousands of persons come to the District in search of employment who have been unable to find any jobs. These people, of course, must be housed.

If the bill is designed to make living quarters available to the jobless, who presumably would be unable to pay any rent, its contribution to solution of the problem will be entirely on the negative side.

Evidence presented during brief hearings indicates that, if there is an emergency, it is much more a matter of inadequate housing than of exorbitant rents. The important objective, therefore, is to stimulate building. In some measure the House District Committee recognized this by exempting from control all housing enterprises begun during the life of the proposed commission. It is questionable, however, whether this discrimination in favor of new buildings would be conducive to investment in rental properties. Returns from investments of this character must be calculated over a long period of years and not from a temporary privileged status.

So far as rents are concerned, it is still to be demonstrated that any acute community-wide emergency has arisen. Certainly there have been some cases of gouging, but the average increase is not exorbitant. Some observers fear that advancement of this measure on Capitol Hill will lead to a wholesale upward adjustment of rents in anticipation of an attempt by the proposed commission to "freeze" rent schedules. From many angles it appears that the proposal to control rents in Washington needs more careful study than the House District Committee has given to the subject.

Exit Ramsay MacDonald

Ramsay MacDonald is let down easily by the statement that his replacement as Prime Minister of Great Britain is due primarily to his failing health. That is the pretext rather than the cause of the shift which brings Stanley Baldwin back to the nominal, as well as actual, leadership of his majesty's government.

Mr. MacDonald's formation of a "national" government, during Britain's financial crisis nearly four years ago, was a beau geste. But the Labor Party refused to follow its erstwhile leader into the coalition he desired and it was never anything but a thinly disguised conservative regime. The support of Mr. MacDonald, his son Malcolm, and the plausible "Jimmie" Thomas, once a leader of railway workers, has been amiably tolerated by the Tories. For the last two, posts have been found in the new cabinet. But since the trio deserted the Labor Party they have been virtually without political influence. And as a pilot, Mr. MacDonald had ceased to steer long before he was dropped.

The change is a reminder that a general election is beginning to loom in Great Britain. Under the English system the prime minister has much discretion in selecting the date. Several factors indicate that it may come as early as this fall. The jubilee celebrations have tended to augment Conservative strength; European war clouds have weakened the appeal of the Labor Party's peace policy; the present government can take full credit for the now unusual feat of maintaining a balanced budget, and the controversial India bill is through the House of Commons—though its ultimate effects are still unpredictable.

The chief weakness of the Conservatives before the electorate is undoubtedly the lack of distinction in British foreign policy during the past four years. But preparation for criticism on this score has been made by easing Sir John Simon into a less important cabinet post, replacing him with Sir Samuel Hoare, former air minister, and, for the past four years, secretary of state for India. Sir Samuel is not generally regarded in England as a brilliant statesman, but of his dependability there has never been any question.

It has been widely anticipated that the vital post of foreign minister would be awarded youthful Anthony Eden, whose recent diplomatic triumphs have done much to redeem the undistinguished record of the national government in the field of diplomacy. Instead, a new and very significant cabinet post has been created for Mr. Eden—minister for League of Nations affairs. The formal establishment of this office not only emphasizes the importance which all British parties attach to Geneva, but also clearly foreshadows the elevation of the popular Mr. Eden to the position of foreign minister when he has acquired somewhat wider experience.

With Walter Elliot remaining as minister of agriculture, Neville Chamberlain as chancellor of the exchequer, and Walter Runciman as president of the board of trade, Mr. Baldwin's cabinet gives the impression of real strength. It contains a good admixture of a vigorous "young Tory" element and can not effectively be attacked by the Labor Party as merely "die-hard." There is real pathos in the fact that the government loses nothing in popular appeal by the passing of Ramsay MacDonald. Hated by Labor, distrusted by Liberals and only tolerated by Conservatives, his unmourned passage from the stage he once dominated should some day provide the climax of a great political biography.

Nix, Garbo.

Back in the days when Theda Bara professed to lead a life among the leopard skins; when Pola Negri smoldered and ate off of black velvet tablecloths; when Rodolf Valentino was forced to knock a man down to defend his right to wear a bracelet, the public still believed motion picture people were a race apart. And it was the consensus that the race was pretty swift. Hollywood was deemed the devil's handiwork, with only the very liberal giving the devil his due for a nice job.

But now the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce is as serious about the virtues of its civic child as is every other branch of that paternal organization regarding its own particular charge. According to publicity, everything in that papier-mache California town is as cozy and orderly as a Sunday school supper, which is a very nice way of telling the world that it can tend to its own knitting and stop looking over spectacles in search of cinema sin.

But several years ago the public, a little fed up with Hollywood "home girls," began casting around for some of the old-time glamour and mystery that had made Maude Adams such a legendary figure. For the past ten years, it has looked as if a skittish, silent girl from Sweden would continue to fill that need for many a day to come. Headlines this week have announced that the Garbo sulks, the Garbo smiles, the Garbo sails. This was all very much in the best Garbo traditions, but alas, even she is not infallible.

For in reply to a telegram from a delegation of reporters who wished to interview her on the ship, she sent back the succinct answer "Nix." Please, Miss Garbo, have a little consideration for illusion and spare the slang. It is almost as though the Sphinx should look a group of tourists in the eye and ejaculate "Hooey!"

Wages, Prices, Profits.

Since the decision in the Schechter case, many employers have pledged themselves not to cut wages, increase hours of labor, or violate rules of fair practice. However sincere these promises may be, very little reliance can be placed upon them, because the individual employer is not a free agent. He is more or less at the mercy of the chiselers whom Gen. Johnson so graphically depicts as the destroyers of the virtuous business man.

It is a rather different matter, however, when 200 executives, representing 90 per cent of the capacity of the steel industry, assemble to pledge maintenance of code wages and hours schedules, and agree to protect employes' rights to collective bargaining.

In adopting a resolution to this effect the leaders of the steel industry have made it evident that they value the achievements which have been made possible by the NRA code under which they have been operating for almost two years. Eugene G. Grace, president of the Iron and Steel Institute, says that the industry has three great obligations: First, to preserve fair treatment for labor; second, to deal fairly with the buying public, and, third, to exercise an intelligent trusteeship of the funds invested in the industry. The significance of the emphasis placed upon the obligation owing to labor should not be underestimated merely because it is accompanied by a warning that if the industry is to maintain labor standards it can not afford to change steel prices.

This linking of the wage and price structure is, on the contrary, an indication that the leaders of the steel industry realize that a code agreement entails public responsibilities when it brings private benefits. They know that if they wish to demonstrate their capacity for self-government, free from the coercion of law, they must not pursue a narrowly selfish policy in their dealings with labor. In view of the traditional hostility of leaders in the steel industry to unionization of workers, the sequence of the emphatic indorsement of collective bargaining, given by Mr. Grace, will be attentively watched.

Not only the steel industry, which was well organized prior to the passage of the recovery act, but various other industries are reported to be planning to "carry on" with a view of regulating competitive practices, hours and wages insofar as possible under the changed conditions. Eventually, no doubt, new legislation defining the limits of the powers of the revived trade associations will be necessary. But organized industries will be in a much better position to press for legislative changes if they have previously demonstrated a capacity for a kind of self-regulation that puts more emphasis on the claims of labor and the public than on the profits of employers.

The Heart Of A Boy.

Ever since the early days of the World War, it has been the fashion to ridicule the self-defeating crudeness of German propaganda. The sneer deepened with the early crudities of Hitlerism—and it was often justified. Now, however, one wonders whether the Wilhelmstrasse is not becoming sublimely subtle.

Herr Hitler's dashing Air Minister flies, with his bride, to the capital of France's ally, Jugoslavia. When he issues from his plane, there are no cheers—but General Goering smiles. As he drives through Belgrade's streets to the German Legation, the spectators watch him in silence. The General keeps on smiling. He can bide his time.

And why? Well, everyone knows that fascinating mechanical toys are made in Germany. And everyone knows what a toy electric railroad means to a lad of twelve. And General Goering also knew that yesterday. King Peter of Jugoslavia was 12 years old. And if King Peter doesn't have a prejudice in favor of General Goering after receiving the model train which the Nazi leader presented to him on that proud occasion—he must be a very unusual boy.

McCarl Enlists More Watchdogs.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Accustomed as the New Deal spenders are to laugh at economic laws and at critical opinion, they nourish a certain grudging respect for Comptroller General John Raymond McCarl, who exercises awe-inspiring veto power over the disbursement of Government funds. And now that McCarl no longer is to be the lone watchdog on the Treasury steps, but is organizing a $6,000,000 kennel to stand guard, how will the open-handed spenders fare?

The Comptroller General's lone-wolf position has had a romantic glamour, but the expenditure of the $4,880,000,000 works-relief fund calls for more detailed inspection than even McCarl can provide.

Imagine the dismay of Ickes, Hopkins, Tugwell and the rest who now, instead of dodging one man's baleful blue pencil, will have to duck a whole organization! It is almost enough to make the most enthusiastic money-shoveler resolve to shovel according to the rules.

Apple Or Banana?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Turn to Genesis III:6," seems to be The Post's reply to my inquiry about the apple that Eve didn't eat. I have read that passage many times, but never found any mention of an apple.

Of course "Adam's apple" is somewhat proverbial; but it is not in the Bible, which is our source of information about Adam. It is said that the "fruit" mentioned in Genesis III:6, is believed, by dwellers in the tropics, to have been a banana! H. B. HASTINGS.

Washington, June 6.

The People Must Decide.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Democratic Federal Government along with its NRA program is definitely stymied by the interstate commerce clause and the separation of powers as expressed in the Schechter case and earlier in the child labor and other cases. Attempts to get around these fundamentals will not prevail unless we have an amending of the Constitution, or a new constitution, or the Supreme Court fails to abide by the present basic law which latter alternative can hardly be imagined.

The present situation strongly accentuates the inflexibility of our present fundamental law and at the same time exhibits our conservative regard for established principles, and our inherent dislike for bureaucracy. The strangest part of the present drama is to see the pronounced champions of States' rights come out for stronger central control as your editorial has shown.

Whatever path we decide to follow must come from the mandate of the ultimate sovereign, the people. Let's follow the law as it is, and not try to circumvent it, save only by the proper legal methods provided by law. R. E. DOBY.

Wagner Bill Implications.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just suppose that the Wagner bill is passed, and that it does what William Green hopes and expects it to do, viz: Make the American Federation of Labor the sole and exclusive agency for "collective bargaining." Would that not bring about a universal "closed shop"—in other words, make it impossible for anyone to work for his living unless he joins and pays dues to the federation? Would it not give the federation complete control of industry—without making any investment therein? Would it not give the federation power to compel the passage of any legislation it wants—and prevent the enactment of any laws it does not want?

While the form of a democratic republic might be kept, for the sake of appearances, would not the actual Government be an irresponsible and despotic labor oligarchy? Incidentally, would it not make William Green "a bigger man than old Grant," or any other President of the United States? I. WONDER.

"Insane Procedure."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "A President Leaves His Party," is timely but inadequate. Hamilton with prophetic vision foresaw that this country would eventually become a great national economic entity or unitary system. With such a premise he was consistently logical in advocating more Federal or centralized political power. His vision is now a reality, while the Jeffersonian doctrine of States' rights as applied to economic conditions is today not only inapplicable and inefficient but positively detrimental—with reference to the major interests of the American people. In fact, it is very questionable even to quote Jefferson in this respect, for he advocated vehemently the right of the people to change their Government and its form, through revolution if need be.

Today, a stock ticker or board of directors in New York City can in five minutes stop the wheels of many industries in any State of the Union, throw thousands out of work, and withdraw large sums of capital. If this array of actual conditions does not demand Federal power of control, then it is hard to realize the need of any major Federal power, so far as the welfare of the people as a whole is concerned. The Bill of Rights in the Constitution is the same generally as that in every State constitution.

Under the Federal system as it is, think of the continued possibility of the repetition of a disastrous situation similar to the present one wherein major Federal laws in operation as long as two years turn out to be no laws at all because they are unconstitutional. What board of directors would call such a procedure other than insane in face of an emergency?

Protection Wanted.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can't we have better protection for our children who must cross Connecticut avenue at Tilden street?

Four days ago a 10-year-old was knocked down and run over while standing in the "safety zone." Two weeks ago my son was standing in the same zone and his coat-tail was fanned. I speak for several mothers in this block. If an adult tries to catch a street car he takes his life in his hands.

We need a much stricter patrol out this way, with a double lane of traffic in progress both going to and from town, plus right and left turns at Tilden street.

"Let's Not Pull The Temple Down."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This fight of Johnson on Richberg over the outcome of the NRA case appealed to the United States Supreme Court is conducive to neither clarity, dignity nor decorum. It rather suggests personal ill will which should not be exhibited in public. In truth, the trouble lies far beyond and much deeper than any mistake in the selection of a case to make test of. It lies at the threshold of the New Deal, and it may be that both are equally responsible, as the same was predicated upon the assumption that the Federal Government possessed emergency powers, which it does not.

But the remarkable thing is that good lawyers still persist in the error of attributing to the Federal Government the possession of such extraordinary power, and in support of such contention cite, with the air of finality, the rent cases arising in New York State and the District of Columbia under emergency rent laws enacted just after the close of the World War. Of course, a little careful analysis shows the fallacy of such argument, for in each case there was the exercise of full police power, in the case of New York the inherent police power acquired from the prerogatives of the English crown and Parliament, and in District of Columbia the power granted by the Constitution in article 1, section 8, over the area constituting the seat of the Government of the United States.

But there is nothing to be gained by throwing up our hands and quitting. We know that the men who framed the Federal Constitution were not men of ox-cart or horse-and-buggy minds, but men of liberal culture and great vision. They did not make the mistake of trying to code the future. They laid down fundamental principles of government, not for their day and generation only, but for the years to come. The clause by which interstate commerce is left to the regulation of the Congress is a plain and simple grant of power to regulate interstate commerce, not the control of the conditions of production, manufacture and distribution. Such a nationalization of the activities of the people, if such was visioned, was properly left to the judgment of the people to be made effective by an amendment to the Constitution.

However, much may be accomplished in the way of effectuating the purposes of the New Deal under the Constitution as it is. Let's see what powers really exist under which such great things may be done toward the attainment of New Deal objectives: "No State shall, without the consent of Congress * * * enter into any agreement or compact with another State * * *," which means that with the consent of Congress agreements and compacts may be entered into. Upon the meaning of this constitutional provision the United States Supreme Court has already unequivocally spoken, not once, but many times. Some hundred years ago, in the case of Rhode Island vs. Massachusetts, 12 Pet. 657, at page 724, the court said: "If Congress consented, then the States were in this respect restored to their original inherent sovereignty, such consent, being the sole limitation imposed by the Constitution, when given, left the States as they were before, as held by this court in Poole vs. Fleeger, 11 Pet. 209."

In short, with the consent of the Congress, the States concerned may go ahead with any program desired. In this way, the sovereignty of the States is preserved, the fear of a national bureaucracy is removed, standardization of the life and habits of the people is avoided and cooperation is based upon the principle of community of interest. In this way we may go forward without the handicap of having to carry along some discordant or dissenting element, as is necessary under a national program. So let's use what the framers of the Constitution really gave us before we throw up our hands and cry out in despair that we are restrained by an outmoded document. The truth is that we are probably restrained only in the sense that we may not do the Samson stunt of pulling the temple down upon ourselves.

The Post Impressionist

"Pleasures And Palaces."

Post Office, Saturday.

IF anybody ever tells you that we Americans aren't a sentimental people, just refer him to the enduring popularity of a song written by a man the 144th anniversary of whose birth will be celebrated tomorrow—together with the fifty-second anniversary of his body's burial in American soil.

The first event seems to have occured at East Hampton, N. Y.; the second certainly took place at Washington. The song was "Home, Sweet Home."

Seven cities claimed Homer as a native son; almost as many Long Island villages—not to mention metropolitan Manhattan—make the same claim to John Howard Payne. Vital statistics weren't regarded as vitally necessary in 1791: birth-records were loosely kept and lightly lost. Nevertheless, a process of elimination leaves the East Hampton pretentions well established.

During the 30 years when Payne's coffin rested at Tunis, the marble slab above his grave declared that "he was born in Boston." But Boston is silent.

The actor-playwright-manager himself seems sometimes to have felt that it might help him in his career to be native to a big city rather than a rural settlement. He occasionally said he was born in New York. But his was a lively imagination—besides, his memory of his birth was admittedly hazy.

There was once a story to the effect that John Howard Payne was the son of Thomas Paine, the English-born American revolutionist who wrote the American "Rights of Man." There is no longer any doubt at all that John Howard's father was of New England origin: William Payne.

Nor is there any doubt that William and his wife lived long in East Hampton, where William was a schoolmaster—and that their children spent much of their childhood in her father's lovely old house there.

All of Payne's people that outlived him were in accord about these points.

So the East Hampton Village Board of Trustees has bet $60,000 on them. It has put that money into the house and grounds, fondly preserving them as a memorial and courageously labeling them;

"HOME, SWEET HOME."

Nobody, anyhow, seems inclined to contradict the account—attributed to Payne—about the origin of that phrase. "Clari, or the Maid of Milan," was first produced at Convent Garden, London, May 8, 1823, and made "Home, Sweet Home" an immediate success. This must have been at least several months before Payne heard, in Italy, the air which suggested the song:

> "One beautiful morning, as I was strolling amid some delightful scenery, my attention was arrested by the sweet voice of a peasant girl who was carrying a basket, laden with flowers and vegetables. This plaintive air she trilled out with so much sweetness . . . that the melody at once caught my fancy.
> "I accosted her, and after a few minutes' conversation, I asked for the name of the song, which she could not give me, but having a slight knowledge of music myself, barely enough for the purpose, I requested her to repeat the air, which she did, while I dotted down the notes as best I could . . . I sent (these notes and [illegible] verses then and there written) to Bishop (the composer). Bishop happened to know the air perfectly well, and adapted it to the words."

It wasn't until nearly a decade later—nearly two decades since he sailed away—that the author of "Home, Sweet Home" returned there. He had gone abroad on a purse raised for him by A. C. Hanson and other Baltimore friends, acting, writing and producing plays in England—he was for a while Washington Irving's dramatic agent. That one song was his one real success, yet he still kept to the grand manner of correspondence:

> "If my resources are diminished, my value for wealth has diminished with them; if I have gained no renown, I have gained what is better, a disregard for the sort of renown of which I was in ardent pursuit; if I go back to the home of my ancestors almost like a prodigal, I go with the certainty of the prodigal's welcome."

And he went—to East Hampton!

Not, to be sure, for long. Most of the time that he then passed in America he passed at a distance from Long Island. Although he wrote to an uncle, "I should like much to settle down in old East Hampton," he was busy in New York, New Orleans, Macon Knoxville and Washington.

He was appointed consul at Tunis by President Tyler in 1842, recalled in '45, reappointed in '51. And there in 1852 he died and was buried. When, in 1883, his body was brought back to his native country, it was taken to Oak Hill Cemetery, here in Washington.

But, for a' that and a' that, the Post Impressionist is willing to back—modestly—the wager of the Village Board of Trustees of East Hampton.

What, No Candidates?

"THE Republican Presidential candidates remind me of the Federal Trade Commission," said Pete, the taxi driver. "What I means by that is that they can't get no attention. Now you takes the Federal Trade Commission. All during this business of the NRA, well, everybody said whatcher goin' do without it? How you goin' protect the gains? How you goin' to protect the good points? We gotta have some sort of agency to preserve things. After all, business can't go along in a chaotic state. There's gotta be some kind of a Government referee. Who's gonna be this referee if it ain't the NRA, that's what people said.

"And all this time, the Federal Trade Commission, they were saying we'd like to be the referee. We'd be a good referee if you'd just give us a chance. And nobody paid any attention to them.

"There was the question of enforcing what they call fair trade practices, and everybody said yeah, yeah, how about the fair trade practices; if there ain't no NRA, how are you gonna enforce the fair trade practices? And the poor little Federal Trade Commission would pipe up and say, so feebly that nobody heard them, 'Why, we'll be glad to enforce the fair trade practices if you'll just let us. We never have had a fair chance.' And about the agreements among employers to abolish the 120,000 children who were employed in child labor. 'We'll be tickled to death to enforce that,' says the commission. And nobody would give them an ear.

"I think it's a shame when a perfectly good commission this way can't make people listen to it. Everybody says, 'Oh, the Federal Trade Commission! There's nothing to it,' and the commission says, 'There'd be something to us if you'd give us a chance.'

* * * *

"Now, it's the same like with the Republican presidential candidates. Everybody says, 'Of course, the Republicans ain't got no chance in 1936, 'cause they got no candidates.' 'Who's gonna be their candidate?' everybody asks. 'They can't get nowheres without a candidate.'

"And about six or seven fellows speak up and say, 'Why, I'm a candidate. I don't understand what they mean when they say the Republicans haven't got a candidate. They've got a candidate, they've got me.'

"There's Ogden Mills,' he says this: there's Mr. Hamilton Fish. Well, to be fair to Mr. Hamilton Fish, he ain't a Republican candidate. He says, or at least he said once, that he wouldn't take the nomination on the Republican ticket alone. Says he, he would just take the nomination at the hands of the people, no particular party, but if the people as a whole demanded that he run then he would do it. 'Well' that's what I call a candidate.

* * * *

"Then there's Col. Knox, and there's Mr. Jimmy Wadsworth. There's what I calls a plethora of candidates, if you know what I mean. And all the time people keep saying 'the Republicans can't win 'cause they ain't got a candidate.' I'll bet that makes these fellows mad, don't you? Here they are, perfectly good candidates, and while Mr. Fish ain't a Republican candidate, he'd run on the Republican ticket if all the people demanded it, and yet they keep saying the Republican can't win 'cause they ain't got no candidates. I'll declare the people are a caution. Sometimes, I just wonders what's wrong with the people and particularly do I wonder what's wrong with the people when they say the Republicans can't win 'cause they got no candidates when all of these candidates are saying just as loud as they can say, 'Why, they got me, the Republicans have.'

"As a matter of fact, there is no end of the candidates the Republicans have. Only yesterday I heard of a man I never heard of before, at least, a man whom I didn't know would be a candidate if the people wanted him to be. He's never ridden in my cab so I don't know him so well, but I hear a lot of men talking about how he would carry what they call the banner very well. His name is Col. Arthur W. Little, a big bookbinder of New York. Seems as though he's also lived in West Virginia and is taking an interest in the paper pulp industry of the South. Not only that, his salesmen say, but he's a World War veteran with wound stripes and Croix de Guerres. He's said to have a large following among the Negro voters, having commanded a Negro regiment in France. In 1932, although a Republican, he threw his support to Roosevelt. I don't know much more about him, but it seems to me candidates are about the least the Republicans should worry about.

"Well, here's where you get out."

Frogs A La Mode

Brooklyn Batrachian Sports Create Small Riot As "Stable" For July Derby Stampedes Candy Shop, Ending Up In Ice Cream And, Later, Police Squad Cars.

By Ralph E. Renaud.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

GREAT events often spring—and spring is the indicated word—from unexpected flops. The temporarily famous frog jumping contest in Central Park, with pedigreed and pampered batrachians entered from all over the United States, was a flop. Abbie Villaret, the fair, or somewhat, bilious green frog champion, leaped only about 2½ feet and then lay over and smiled sheepishly, or froggishly, at her shameful accomplishment. Not so the Frogs a la Mode of Brooklyn. They have just staged a great event. The purlieus of Miss Basin, the airy reaches of Brooklyn Heights, are still ringing with their achievements. If you don't believe it ask Isador Cender, the big lollipop and ice cream man, of Flatbush avenue.

It began this way, Charles "Chuck" Brown, 13 years old, and two friends, Billy and Gene, read about Abbie Villaret, and though to the world at large she may have been the combination Jean Harlow and Helen Jacobs of frogdom, to Chuck, Billy and Gene she was a washout. They thought the frogs of Miss Basin could jump the hind legs off of her. Later events were to prove they were right. Moreover, another frog jumping contest was scheduled for Pospect Park in July and they wanted to give their entries plenty of time to train and to learn a few simple words like "one, two, three" and "go!"

So the boys went down to Miss Basin and collected a hundred frogs, all good, muscular bull frogs with no sissy frogs among them. Chuck put his frogs in a paper oyster container and wrapped it in a paper bag. Gene and Billy just put their frogs in paper bags. It had been a strenuous zoological effort and the trolley ride homeward was long. The boys felt hot and tired so they stopped at Mr. Isador Cender's candy store for a little ice cream.

* * * *

BILLY and Gene put their paper bags on the counter where they could keep an eye on them, but Chuck deposited his bag on the metal container, near the door, which holds Mr. Cender's assorted ice creams. In filling the orders Mr. Cender moved the paper bag and opened the containers. He shouldn't have done either. While he was carrying three dishes of ice cream to the counter the great frog prison break occurred.

In the flash of an eye, to be strictly accurate, the atmosphere of Mr. Cender's candy shop was filled with frogs. Mr. Cender, Mrs. Cender (better known in confectionary circles as 'Ma' Cender), Chuck, Billy and two women customers looked on aghast and paralyzed. Several of the frogs plopped into the vanille ice cream, though some preferred chocolate or strumberry. Others leaped to the cake trays. A number dived straight at Ma Cender as she testified afterward. All of them made Abbie Villaret look sick. In a moment the boys were jumping almost as fast as the frogs, but catching frogs in a swamp and rounding them up in a candy shop are quite different.

The women customers shrieked and fled, with uplifted skirts. Ma Cender shrieked. Pa Cender roared. The boys darted busily about with cries of encouragement or despair. The frogs continued to jump, all except those who had found a last, happy home in the ice cream. It was noisy while it lasted and it lasted some time. Within a few minutes telephone calls began to pour in from the neighborhood to the Bergen Street Police Station. Most of the callers said the Reds were rioting in Center's candy store. Four police radio cars, their sirens screeching through the twilight, bore down on Cender's.

THE frogs were still fighting their battle of the Marne. Eight policemen charged into the store. But they should have had nets instead of nightsticks. They milled around for a while but only managed to arrest 11 amphibians. Thirty-three were missing or unaccounted for. Ma Cender was sure that a number had found refuge in her bed in the rear of the store. One was excavated from the vanilla container and another from the strumberry. They were taken to the morgue and up to press time, had not been identified. They are entered on the blotter merely as 'frogs a la mode.'

Mr. Cender did not catch any frogs, but he had Chuck by the collar. "Lowlifes! Gonifs!" he yelled. "Three gallons of ice cream which it is practically ruint!" Chuck offered to give him all the frogs which were left around the shop. Indignantly, Mr. Cender demanded Chuck's arrest, so Chuck rode away in four radio cars. At the station-house the sergeant refused to hold him, pointing out that he had neither jumped into the ice cream nor the cake trays.

And was Mr. Cender hoarse with rage! Boy, you would have thought he had a frog in his throat.

THE Park Department's portable farm may or may not be spreading rural knowledge among the children of the proletariat. The farm-on-a-truck is in charge of John Murray and he has made a careful compilation of comments made by young visitors from the East Side. Here are some of them:

1. The comb of a turkey is made of paper.

2. Grain, being relished by sheep and cows, ought to do the house cat a lot of good.

3. The spurs on a turkey's legs are (a), buttons; (b), detachable.

4. The gobbling of a turkey constitutes: (a), hollering; (b), barking; (c), crying.

5. Kids are a species of (a), dog; (b), sheep.

6. The farm hands sleep in the portable barn.

7. The common name of the genus capra is: (a) Annie-goat; (b), Danny-goat; (c), man-goat; (d), ninny-goat.

8. Cows are male.

9. Fantailed pigeons are: (a), chickens; (b), ducks; (c), young turkeys.

10. A cow could give a goat a swell beating if it felt like it.

UP on Park Avenue they have just opened a Puppy Club. It is not as you might suppose, for young college graduates, but is strictly confined to pedigreed pooches whose owners want to give them a little companionship and some of the benefits of club life on Manhattan. It is located in a penthouse and the cuisine is supervised by one of the best dog chefs in the business, with a veterinarian in attendance for overeaters.

There is also a cat club in New York—no fooling. It is not the Kit Kat Club, either, but a place where you can take your cat and let her (or him, if it's a Tommy) enjoy the pleasures of catnip balls, brussels-carpet-covered-cushions for scratching, and sleeping bunks arranged like bureau drawers, which cats love to curl up in.

It might enhance the exhilaration of the Puppy Club if a joint opening day could be arranged with the Cat Club.

Sea Voyages ThenAndNow

By

William Lyon Phelps

AS this is a season of the year when many Americans are about to take ship for Europe, it is interesting to compare experiences of former times with those of today.

Washington Irving in "The Sketch Book," published in 1819, has an essay entitled "The Voyage" which it is amusing to read in the light of the twentieth century.

"To an American visiting Europe, the long voyage he has to make is an excellent preparative . . . a sea voyage is full of subjects for meditation; but then they are the wonders of the deep and of the air, and rather tend to abstract the mind from worldly themes. I delighted to loll over the quarter-railing or climb to the maintop, of a calm day, and muse for hours together on the tranquil bosom of the deep," etc.

* * * *

Last year one American asked another if he had a rough sea; to which the other replied, "I don't know; I never saw it." And indeed during the six days he had either stayed inside playing bridge or had lived on deck within the inclosed spaces.

Yet if one had congenial or inspiring company, those long voyages of 30 to 60 days must have had a charm absent from the modern express ferryboat. If I had my choice of coming back to the world for six months during the eighteenth century, I think I should choose to cross the ocean on one of those interminable voyages made by Benjamin Franklin.

* * * *

To be inclosed at sea for 60 days on a sailing ship with Franklin would be more exciting and more profitable than many a year in a modern university.

In 1852, when Thackeray came over to deliver in America his lectures on the English humorists, two of his fellow passengers were James Russell Lowell and the English poet, Arthur Hugh Clough. If some Boswell had reported their conversation, it might have made one of the best books of the nineteenth century.

Paris At Random

Andre Vulliet

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

EXACTLY 50 years ago this month, a glorious body lay in state for two nights under Napoleon's triumphal arch in Paris. In the most gigantic funeral ceremony ever staged anywhere, it was slowly taken to the Pantheon, the burial temple of France's great dead, through streets that were jammed with people.

Buried with the so-called simplicity of a poor man, the national hero was accompanied in his last ride by cavalry men, soldiers, ambassadors, foreign delegates, and representatives of the political, literary, scientific, artistic, business and labor worlds, in silk hats, morning jackets, caps and overalls. Every form of humanity was there.

Such an extravagant funeral performance, no doubt, convinced every one that Victor Hugo was the greatest literary genius ever born, not only in France but in the whole world.

Today, although the fiftieth anniversary of the poet's death has been celebrated with official pomp by French official circles, Victor Hugo's supremacy in the list of French geniuses is very widely questioned. Claude Farrere, noted French writer, caused a sensation this winter when he wrote a piece called, "Victor Hugo, the Greatest Fool of the Nineteenth Century."

He was immediately followed by an army of young talents who seem to have made a point of blowing out what they call the fallacy of France's No. 1 poet as a philosopher, a politician, a patriot and a great character. And, considering the French press and the public at large, it seems that the Hugo commemorative ceremonies were completely outdone by the supership Normandie's inauguration.

* * * *

This, we must say, was a considerable event in the Paris season, although it took place at Le Havre, 150 miles from the French capital. It was followed throughout the country with close attention and national pride, for fear that a last-minute hitch should cause a delay in the liner's sailing.

This column, as it happens, will travel on the Normandie's maiden voyage, and if everything runs according to schedule it should be in Washington in record time.

While everyone is wondering what the new "pier 88," especially built on the Hudson River for the French Line, looks like, the French are confident that the new maritime station and pier inaugurated at Havre, together with the Normandie, will have no peer, even in America. At last, American tourists debarking from French boats will no longer find themselves in that ramshackle customs hall which drove them mad almost regularly.

The new station has four railroad tracks that lead up to pink-tiled platforms, and, on inaugural day, the 2,000 or more guests who were taken from and back to Paris by the French Line on four special trains, thought they were slowly steaming up into a bathroom. To strike their guests, French Line officials did their best to make the porters stand up straight in parade-like formation, but to no avail. The minute they tried to put a squad of porters in regular rows, another disbanded. The French may be good warriors, but they certainly are no paraders.

American attorneys are now collecting funds for a memorial window to be placed in the Treguier Cathedral, in Brittany, in honor of Saint Yves, the only lawyer who was also a saint, a coincidence which, according to an old Latin epigram, "astounded the people."

A bronze tablet, presented by the American Bar Association already may be found in the church. Prof. John H. Wigmore, dean of the Law School of Northwestern University at Evanston, Ill., is chairman of the committee which is arranging for the stained-glass window. Pendleton Beckley, formerly of Louisville, Ky. and now of Paris, heads the Paris committee.

This gift to the most popular of Breton saints was suggested to a group of visiting Americans by the Rev. Father Louis Laine, archpriest of the Cathedral, who served as interpreter with the A. E. F., and was wounded with the American soldiers at Montfaucon.

Richmond Bid Lowest For Military Park Job

Special Dispatch to The Post.

A bid totaling $54,000 by Doyle & Russell, of Richmond, was lowest among three submitted to the National Park Service yesterday for a new administration building at the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania County National Military Park in Virginia, according to the Associated Press.

O. G. Taylor, counsel, said the park service hoped to have the bid approved in the new two weeks. The low bid set the completion date within 180 calendar days of the award. The total bid included construction of the administration building in Georgian architecture, garage and service building.

J. L. Sherrard Is Guest at Luncheon Meeting of University.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., June 7.—Ninety-two-year-old J. L. Sherrard, of Crozet, Va., the oldest living alumnus of Washington and Lee University, today attended the alumni luncheon and meeting at the university.

He was a student at Washington College, now Washington and Lee, from 1858 to 1861. At the outbreak of the Civil War he was commissioned a lieutenant in the Confederate Army with the Liberty Hall volunteers, a company of Washington College students.

After the war he entered the Presbyterian ministry, but is now retired.

Dr. Claudy Reelected.

The Alumni Association reelected Dr. J. L. Claudy, of Bellefonte, Pa., as president.

The association received a portrait of William L. McElwee, of Lexington, a catcher on the Washington and Lee baseball team of 1878 when the first curve ball in Southern college baseball was hurled to the great mystification of the opposition. The portrait shows McElwee as a student in his baseball uniform.

A tablet commemorating approximately 120 years of service to the university by John Lyle Campbell and two of his sons, John Lyle Campbell, jr., and Harry Donald Campbell, was unveiled in Lee Chapel.

The Thomas Nelson Page medal, given annually for outstanding work at the university, was presented to Harry St. G. T. Carmichael, of Kyrock, Ky.

The session followed the 186th commencement exercises this morning at which Dr. Robert T. Lester, secretary of the Carnegie Foundation, declared that "non-expert" citizens must be able to judge critically issues of local, national and international importance if democratic government is to survive.

Degrees to 122 Graduates.

Academic degrees were conferred upon 122 graduates and honorary degrees given to State Senator Henry Wickham, Allan Nevins, Columbia University professor and Pulitzer Prize winner, and Oscar C. Huffman, of New York, president of the Continental Can Co.

Awards presented included the following:

Endowed scholarships—John M. McCardell, Frederick, Md.; S. T. Miller, Aqua, Va.; Powell Glass, jr., Lynchburg; D. N. Walker, Richmond; I. G. Shively, Chambersburg, Pa.

Departmental scholarships—O. L. Hirst, Alexandria; J. L. Taylor, Lexington; E. W. Howerton, Clarksville, Va.; J. A. Taylor, Lexington; Robert Morris, Washington; J. L. Price, Chase City.

2 Negroes Listed On Loudoun Jury

First Recognition in Years in Virginia County.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leesburg, Va., June 7. — The names of two Negroes were placed on the list of 48 persons which Judge J. R. H. Alexander this morning selected for grand jury service in Loudoun County for the coming year. Out of this list the clerk of the court makes up the list for each term of court. It was not indicated today whether a Negro was included in the number called for grand jury service Monday morning when the June term of Loudoun County Circuit Court convenes.

The action of the judge marks the first time since readjuster days in Virginia that Negroes have been recognized for such service in Loudoun County.

The case of Thomas Quesenberry, charged with the murder of Corporal C. J. McClary, of Alexandria, on March 17, will be set Monday. The case has been twice postponed, once due to the quashing of the indictment and later because of the resignation of Commonwealth Attorney John Galleher to become NEC director of Virginia. Galleher has been appointed special prosecutor for the case. Defense lawyers are Stilson H. Hall and Lucas D. Phillips.

$1,000 Portrait Asked For 13-Day Secretary

The House has been asked to authorize an appropriation of $1,000 to pay for a portrait of a Secretary of the Navy who served in that capacity only 13 days. The Cabinet member was Thomas Walker Gilmer.

On the consent calendar for consideration probably next week is the resolution introduced by Representative John W. Flannagan jr. (Democrat), of Virginia, and reported favorably by the House Naval Affairs Committee.

Gilmer was Secretary under President John Tyler from February 15 to February 28, 1844, when he was killed in an explosion of a gun aboard the U. S. S. Princeton.

A Navy Department report pointed out that the list of Navy Secretary portraits in the department lacks eight former Secretaries.

Secretary Gilmer is survived by a grandson, Beverly T. Gilmer, who resides at Draper, Va.

Cynical, outspoken men (oh, yes, there are a few left) will tell you there's no place like home . . . for a woman to stay! But the ladies, God bless 'em, think differently. They began by running us men out of the barber shops, and now they've gone into business, politics, sociology, law and the arts with a vengeance. Their success makes mere males turn green with envy, for the hand that used to rock the cradle is now making so much money ruling the world that its owner can hire cradle-rockers.

How did these famous women get that way? We men are curious, and there are thousands of women who would appreciate a few tips. What brought fame to Mrs. Piechart, the statistician? To what does Madame la Scribble, the novelist, attribute her success? How did Miss Brainstorm become a celebrated psychologist?

Four bright young women of The Post's staff . . . Virginia Lee Warren, Hope Ridings Miller, Elizabeth Young and Frances Mangum . . . can answer those questions for you. Their interviews with women renowned in the scientific, theatrical, business and social worlds are featured on The Post's women's pages each day.

Once upon a time, whenever a woman lawyer or doctor, or any woman who had become successful in her chosen field, was to be interviewed, the City Editor collared a protesting police reporter or rewrite man from the local room and sent him out. The resulting interview was always terrible, because no man knows how to put questions to a woman. Women do it much better . . . you know how the ladies can size up each other!

There are many successful women in Washington: writers, business women, social workers, scientists, economists. Their experiences are interesting, their opinions are thought-provoking, their personalities are outstanding. Interviews with these women, written by intelligent reporters, are almost required reading. If you haven't been following them each day in The Post, you've been missing something.

If you're a man, you'll be surprised to discover how women find success. If you're a woman, you'll learn how other women really made good on their threats to leave the dishes in the sink and start a tea room, or an interior decorating show, or run for Congress.

These interviews, each one different, each one important, each one interesting, will be found on the woman's pages of

Tax Rate Rise Of 61 Cts. Seen In Montgomery

Heavy Expenses, Decreased Revenues to Boost Levy to $1.51.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Montgomery County's tax rate probably will be increased approximately 61 cents, it was learned yesterday. The rate is expected to rise from the present 90 cents to $1.51 on each $100 of assessed values. The Montgomery County commissioners hope to be able to cut the rate down to approximately $1.40.

Appropriations of $1,633,362.91 have been scheduled by the commissioners at several budget conferences, and this would necessitate the 61 cents increase.

The commissioners hope, however, by reductions in some of the allocations and through an increase in the taxable basis to reduce the increase to 50 cents.

The estimates are based by County Accountant Alexander K. Hancock on the new assessable basis of $104,113,350, which is an increase of $877,600 above the basis for the last fiscal year. It is expected that a number of items yet to be added will increase the basis considerably.

The operating costs of the county will be increased by about $765,634.92 more than last year's budget, which was $867,727.99.

The increases were attributed by Hancock to interest charges on bonds, increased operating expenses for the county schools, the manner of meeting salaries of certain county employes and the increase in the police budget necessitated by the seven additional policemen authorized by the last session of the General Assembly.

The county had expected assistance from the State in meeting bond interest charges this year and had levied only $67,819.53 for this purpose. Since the help is not forthcoming, it is necessary to levy $481,835.13. The school board has asked for an increase of $604,736 for schools while the last year's item was only $444,771.50.

A number of employes whose salaries formerly were met through fees levied on tax sales will have to be paid from the budget this year because of the lowering of tax sale fees by the General Assembly.

Taking of testimony in the latest phase of the Montgomery County recount case was completed yesterday in Police Court at Rockville, Md., before Judge Harold C. Smith.

The hearing was to develop testimony in the claim by Fusion County Commissioners Frank H. Karn and Charles E. King that unused and spoiled ballots which had been in the custody of the clerk to the board of election supervisors had been accessible to a number of persons and that therefore the recount would not be a fair one.

Counsel for John B. Diamond and Raleigh S. Chinn, defeated Democratic candidates for county commissioner, contended, however, that these ballots had no part in the election result.

F. Byrne Austin, clerk to the supervisors of election, testified that the ballot boxes from the various voting precincts had not been opened while in his custody, but had been turned over still sealed to Clayton K. Watkins, clerk of the circuit court. Watkins testified that the ballot boxes had been kept locked in a room in the jail since they were turned into his custody.

The testimony will be added to that of 128 witnesses who have previously testified and will be presented to Chief Judge Hammond Urner and Associate Judge Arthur D. Willard for study. Should the judge decide the ballots left out would affect the result of the election, it is probable that the recount then would be lost definitely and permanently. Should they decide otherwise, it is possible that the recount then will be heard on its merits. So far no actual hearing has been held on the recount petition itself. The entire proceedings so far have been in connection with technicalities brought up by Fusion attorneys.

Application of Bernard J. Poss for a license to sell beer at the Shady Grove Camp, near Gaithersburg, was rejected yesterday by the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board. The board held that Poss was not the operator within the meaning of the law.

The board was notified that the State license board will sit June 19 at 2 p. m. at Rockville courthouse to hear the appeals of Mrs. Bessie Beahm and George Martin of the refusal of the county body to issue license to sell beer.

Taking a leaf from the tactics of the gasoline service stations, the board has erected an electric sign at Bethesda dispensary, which states "Wine and Liquors at D. C. Prices."

Charter membership in the Silver Spring Citizens Association will be kept open until the next meeting, June 27, it was voted at a meeting held Thursday night at the Liquor Dispensary Building in Silver Spring. A new constitution and by-laws were adopted, and a membership drive is being conducted.

The association voted to cooperate with the Woman's Improvement Club in sponsoring a card party at Jesup Blair Community House June 24, and authorized appointment of a committee to have charge of a concession at the fair to be held under auspices of the public health lay committee June 17 and 18 at the National Guard Armory in Silver Spring.

Peggy Tyner Weds Today In England

Capital Girl Marries John Dugdale, of Gloucestershire.

King's Savoy Chapel in London Is Scene of Nuptials.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Of wide interest to Washington society is the marriage of Miss Peggy Tyner, daughter of Mrs. Elonzo Tyner, of Washington, to Mr. John Dugdale, son of Col. and Mrs. Arthur Dugdale, of Sezincote, Moreton-in-Marsh, Gloucestershire, England, this morning in the King's Savoy Chapel at London.

The bride, one of the loveliest blondes in Capital society, will be given in marriage by her brother, Mr. John Gage Tyner. She will wear a gown of white satin fashioned on severely simple lines, with a slightly dropped shoulder line, long-fitting sleeves and a long train. Her veil of white illusion will be simply arranged, and she will carry a sheaf of calla lilies.

Mrs. William Stork, jr., of Holland, a sister of the bride, will be matron of honor, and Miss Caroline Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Huston Thompson, of Washington, who is visiting in England, will be bridesmaids. Another bridesmaid will be little Miss Rose Mary Spencer-Cooper, a cousin of the bridegroom.

Lionel Perry Is Best Man.

Mrs. Stork and Miss Thompson will wear gowns of delphinium blue chiffon, fashioned with brief trains, and Empire hats of blue ostrich feathers. They will carry pink roses and blue delphinium. Little Miss Spencer-Cooper will wear a frock of pink organdie over a blue taffeta slip, fashioned with a long ruffled skirt, a dropped shoulder line with straps of tiny rose buds, and a pink poke bonnet tied under her chin with blue ribbons. She will carry a bouquet of pink and blue forget-me-nots.

Mr. Lionel Perry will be best man.

After the ceremony there will be a breakfast at the Jules Hotel for relatives and intimate friends, after which the young couple will leave for a wedding trip on the Continent, where they will visit in Vienna and Budapest. They will make their home in London.

Mrs. Tyner, mother of the bride, sailed several weeks ago to join her daughter, who has been visiting with Col. and Mrs. Dugdale.

Attended D. C. School.

The bride attended Holton Arms School in Washington and later completed her studies abroad, first at L'Ermitage at Versailles, and then at the Princess Vladimir Galitzine's country school in Surrey, England. Still later she studied at the Countess de Precour's school in Paris. She was presented at the Court of St. James several years ago, after her debut in Washington.

The bride's father, the late Elonzo Tyner, was a nephew of James Noble Tyner, once Postmaster General, and was related to Elizabeth Barrett Browning. Mr. Tyner was a member of the National Defense Council in Washington during the World War. On the maternal side, she is a direct descendant of Gen. Thomas Gage, of Revolutionary fame, who was the second son of Viscount Gage, of Sussex County, England. She is also related to the late Lyman Tyner, one-time Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Dugdale, who is a nephew of Field Marshal Lord Roberts, is a graduate o fOxford. He was later sent to Shanghai, China, as honorary attache of the British Embassy, and two years later came to this country on a lecture tour.

Mrs. Tyner will remain abroad until late next fall, returning then to her apartment in the Shoreham.

Yeast Proves A Great Help In Dog Food

New Eyelet Frocks Are Cool and Practical for Office.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

MRS. GREEN lives in Apartment 202. Mrs. Brown lives next door in 203. Not long ago both Mrs. Green and Mrs. Brown bought two puppies from the same litter. Now, every morning and every evening you'll see these two plump, elderly ladies airing their dogs in the court adjoining their apartment.

Since the double adoption took place there has been keen rivalry between the two. When Mrs. Green bought Fido a handsome brown leather leash Mrs. Brown went one better and bought Woofums a red one studded with brass beads. Mrs. Green ordered special milk for Fido. Mrs. Brown ordered cream. To Apartment 202 the butcher sends ground sirloin tips every day. Next door he delivers calves' liver.

Of late there has been a decided feeling of strain between these two amicable neighbors, for Fido is growing by leaps and bounds and poor little Woofums is a sorry contrast. Try as she might, Mrs. Brown can't pry into the secret of why. Mrs. Green just smiles, pats Fido's head and says nothing.

But of course there's a reason, why one little puppy is excelling the other. Here it is: Mrs. Green heard about a certain irradiated dry yeast that works miracles with dogs. She was a little dubious at first that one such product would do all that's claimed of it. No more though! She has only to look at Fido, and then at Woofums, and she knows she's on the right track!

This irradiated yeast is all yeast. It contains no filler. It is an exceptionally rich source of Vitamins B, G and D. It has been purposely rendered inactive to prevent the danger of bloating. Furthermore, it does not have to be kept in a refrigerator and yet it will last for a good six months and loose not one iota of its vitamin strength.

There are three reasons why this yeast is excellent for dogs. First, it has a tonic effect—thanks to the presence of Vitamin B. Second, it helps the dog to a healthy skin. If your pet is constantly scratching himself, don't be too sure that parasites are to blame. He's apt to have skin troubles. The Vitamin G will remedy this! Third, it will help your dog have strong bones because it enables him better to assimilate calcium and phosphorus. These minerals will not be properly deposited in his bones and teeth unless there is an adequate amount of Vitamin D in his food. The yeast furnishes this.

It's no trouble at all to give. You simply add one teaspoonful to his food. Before long, you'll see how much huskier he is, what a sleek coat he has, and all in all, what a healthy dog he has grown to be.

New Eyelet Frocks.

There are lots of men who say "Not so bad!" when they mean something is perfectly swell. And there are lots of men who are going to say "Not so bad!"—this time with a brand new emphasis—when they see their wives in one of the stunning eyelet frocks featured in a local store.

These attractive dresses are truly miracles for the money! They cost only $2.95, but you'd never guess it! Each and every one of them has style galore. And what's more they're the zenith of practicality. You can trust one of these frocks to look neat and nice whenever you choose to wear it.

Business women find them ideal for the office because they're so cool and comfortable. As for upkeep, never you mind! Easiest things in the world to wash and they still look as good as new!

Among them are many striking color contrasts and high fashion notes such as jabots, boleros and shirtwaist effects.

They are available in pastels, brown, navy, and white. Don't delay your shopping for you can depend on it bargains like these sell like hotcakes!

Political Study Incumbent On Women, Teacher Says

A study of government is an important part of the modern woman's education, thinks Miss E. Jeffries Heinrich, instructor in citizenship in the extension division of the University of Virginia.

Feminine Approach to Citizenship Usually Nonpartisan, Miss E. Jeries Heinrich, University of Virginia Instructor, Asserts.

MOST MEN either know, or profess to know, all about government. Women, on the other hand, make no pretenses. They admit their lack along this line, but are willing to learn. Studying citizenship much as they would history, chemistry or literature, they learn about government from an educational, rather than a political point of view.

These are observations of Miss E. Jeffries Heinrich, instructor in citizenship and government for the extension division of the University of Virginia. The guest of Miss Mary Elizabeth Pidgeon, Miss Heinrich came to Washington to confer with Mrs. Irving Whitehead, vice chairman of the Virginia State Democratic committee, and Mrs. James H. Wolfe, acting chairman of the women's division of the Democratic national committee, in regard to the "reporter plan" of teaching citizenship.

Yesterday, as she told something of her work among women in Virginia, Miss Heinrich said she believed the time would soon come when every progressive woman would make a study of government part of her education."

Non-Partisan Attitude Noted.

She pointed out that only in recent years had women of the South taken an active interest in politics, "and even today they try to keep their study of citizenship separate from its political implications," she said. "In fact, they generally approach the whole subject from a non-partisan point of view."

An attractive woman with dark hair, blue eyes and a rose-petal complexion, Miss Heinrich is, in many respects, typical of the modern Southern woman. As feminine in appearance as her grandmother probably was. But, in contrast to her feminine forebears, she is keenly concerned with the machinery of government and the motivating force behind it.

Her personality and her preparation for the work made her an ideal person to teach the course created by the University of Virginia at the request of Mrs. Lila Meade Valentine, a woman whose name was one to conjure with in the early days of woman suffrage.

"Mrs. Valentine felt women were being admitted into a world about which they knew little, and would need such a course as a basis for intelligent participation in the Government," Miss Heinrich said.

Since it was begun in 1920, the course has proved popular with women throughout Virginia. The first teacher was Miss Pidgeon, who is now with the research division of the Women's Bureau, United States Department of Labor.

Miss Heinrich has been the instructor since 1926. She had previously had wide experience in the educational field and had also served as regional secretary of the National League of Women Voters.

Since she has been with the University of Virginia, she has given, in addition to the course, numerous informal lectures to individuals and clubs through lectures, short courses, institutes and home study courses. She has also co-operated with women's organizations in carrying out educational programs.

Discussing why "women rarely fail in political jobs," Miss Heinrich pointed out "they generally have definite ability for the line of work to which they are appointed, and they are usually eager to prove they can do the work as well as a man."

Tests Evolved For Immunity To Paralysis

CHILDREN now can be tested for immunity to infantile paralysis, Dr. Maurice Brodie announced in an article in the June issue of the Parents Magazine. Dr. Brodie is assistant to Dr. William S. Park, director of New York City's Health Department, Bureau of Laboratories, where scientists have been working for years to determine immunity for poliomyelitis.

The latest frontal attack on infantile paralysis is being led by a band of white mice which are aptly characterized as animate test tubes. Into these test tubes the bacteriologist injects some blood from a person whose immunity he wishes to determine, together with a fatal dose of the polio virus. If, within three or four days, the mice fall very ill, it is a sign the human blood did not contain enough antibodies to keep the poor mice from getting the disease. If the mice keep well, the verdict is that the individual did have antibodies in plenty, and that person is immune.

If this test with white mice turns out to be as practical as hoped, only those who are not immune will have to be injected with the vaccine, of which, at present, there is not enough to inoculate every child in the United States.

The vaccine which gave a nine months' immunity to 80 per cent of the first children inoculated is obtained, according to the magazine, from Rhesus monkeys imported from India at such high price that every dose costs about $1.50.

Handicaps That Bar Learning To Read and Write Analyzed

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

PHYSICAL conditions are often responsible for retarding the school work of children. Parents often bring their children to physicians to find out why they do not progress normally and, in some cases, a satisfactory answer may be given and remedial measures suggested. There are a number of unfortunates in whom poor school work is due to mental deficiency. This situation can easily be determined by the physician, and, in justice to the child, it should be recognized early, as the subnormal youngster must not be forced to keep up with normal children. There are special schools for such children.

When these cases have been eliminated there remains a large number of children who possess a normal mentality, but who have a peculiar difficulty in learning to read and write. These children are often left-handed and have a tendency to stammer.

Many youngsters who are sent for examination of the eyes are found to be suffering from eye strain, the result of a refractive error or of an improper balance of the eye muscles. The detection of such conditions early and their correction by glasses when necessary or by proper attention to the eye muscles will often add to the ease with which a child learns to read and to do his school work.

One result of eye examinations of children has been that some children are given glasses unnecessarily. A properly trained expert will never prescribe glasses unless the refractive error is great enough so that he feels that the use of glasses in school will be helpful to the child. The same is true of exercises and operations on the eye muscles.

What of Student Whose Mind Is Debased by College, Writer Asks.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I accept the challenge implied in your column June 5, of answering "Socrates," who spoke in defense of college education as necessary to achieving success in life. That is an interesting subject for debate, and there is much to be said on both sides of the question.

I read "Socrates'" letter carefully, noting all his major points. I will admit college education is worthwhile for the sincere student who studies, not to please his parents nor to impress his friends, but for his own gratification and enlightenment.

Yet what of the student who goes to college only to return home with his ideas of life so radically changed that he becomes a heartache to his parents?

* * * *

I am not college-bred, but I can not deny the evidence of my own eyes that college study does occasionally broaden the mind of the mentally-receptive student. But I have also seen another result—the debasement of the student mind, where the individual is not strong enough to withstand the temptations inherent in a sudden increase of personal freedom. I have observed with mingled amazement and concern the conduct of students, often from fine background, who accept college life as an opportunity to indulge in moral laxity.

* * * *

I am past college age and I understand life better now than I did some years ago. And I sometimes wonder if I would be making a greater success of things, materially and mentally, if I had had a college education. One of my friends is a college graduate. I have known both him and his family in a social way for a long time. His father's health failed as the result of financial losses sustained in the depression, and he subsequently died. The son later wrote an article, published in a leading periodical, discussing his own college education.

* * * *

Some of his admissions were startling. Among other things, he revealed his father spend $30,000 on his education, both in this country and at the Sorbonne. He was trained for journalism. Briefly, his conclusion was that if he ever has a son of his own he will not waste the son's time or his own hypothetical $30,000 on a college education.

I can say without malice that the worst handicap this boy had to overcome was a lifelong training in snobbery. Not until his father died, and he was thrown upon his own resources, did he discover there is often merit to be found in individuals whose lives have never been divorced from toil and comparative poverty.

* * * *

If college is primarily concerned with building character in students, why doesn't it make a strong and concerted effort to uproot snobbishness from the mind of man? Why does it leave this phase of character-building to the School of Hard Knocks to do? Do colleges as a whole approve of and encourage snobbishness?

* * * *

I was somewhat surprised to find "Socrates" commenting in his letter: "We learn to temper our ideas, prejudices and ambitions in the light of increased knowledge of the world. . . ." Why? Because it was his postgraduate work in a world he had to face without funds which taught my college-bred friend real social democracy.

* * * *

True, I have known some fine college graduates, completely devoid of sham and fraud; but I have known others who were pitifully and unwarrantedly vainglorious. My father, a college graduate, once said: "You can lead a child to education but you can not make him drink. It's a mistake to try to force his appetite for learning." And that, I think, is a mistake too many doting parents make. Sincerely.

C. F. P.

The Individual Decides.

DEAR C. F. P.: In my opinion, the answers to your questions: ". . . what of the student who goes to college only to return home with his ideas of life so radically changed that he becomes a heartache to his parents?" and ". . . do colleges as a whole approve of and encourage snobbishness?" may be found in the June 5 and June 6 issues of this column.

* * * *

Writing out of their own experience as college graduates, "Socrates" and "Contemporary," whose respective letters were printed on those dates, painted a picture of college as a treasure house of knowledge and social experience, and made it rather indisputably evident that what one carries away from college depends very largely upon what one brings in the way of capacity and taste.

* * * *

One should keep in mind that college is intended to supplement rather than counteract character training and education begun in the home; that educators can scarcely be expected to obviate in four or more years the effects of erroneous upbringing such as, for instance, ". . . a lifelong training in snobbery."

First prize, $3, is awarded Mrs. Anne Mundy, 1504 V street southeast, for her recipe for stuffed drumsticks. Second prize, $2, goes to Mrs. Rexford L. Holmes, 236 Massachusetts avenue northeast, for potato salad in green peppers, and third prize, $1, to Mrs. Anne Page Chewning, 406 George street, Fredericksburg, Va., for picnic beverage.

2 pounds veal steak, ¾ inch thick
Salt and pepper
10 soda crackers
½ teaspoon poultry seasoning
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup milk
½ cup evaporated milk
Hot water

Cut veal in triangles about 4 inches long. Season and fill with the following stuffing: Crumble 7 crackers and mix with onion, melted butter, seasoning and fresh milk. Skewer in the shape of drumsticks (chicken legs). Crumble 3 crackers fine. Dip skewered meat in evaporated milk and roll in fine cracker crumbs. Heat fat in heavy frying pan and brown quickly on all sides. Add 1 cup of hot water; cover and cook until tender, 40 minutes.

These can be made the day before so that they are nice and cold.

Potato Salad in Green Peppers.

Select medium-sized peppers of uniform and symmetrical shape. Wash thoroughly and cut off tops slightly below stem, using these tops subsequently as "covers." Remove seeds carefully and fill shells with your favorite potato salad. Replace "covers," wrap each shell in paraffin paper and pack compactly in a box or other container. Wooden forks may be provided for individual servings.

The flavor from the pepper shell will be found to add a delightful tang to the salad.

Picnic Beverage.

1 quart fresh orange juice
1 pint fresh grapefruit juice
1 quart White Rock, or carbonated water.

Pack in separate bottles in a bucket of ice. Mix just before serving.

Fruit and Nut Bars.

1 cup brown sugar
¾ cup whole-wheat flour
3 eggs, beaten separately
1 teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup nuts
1 cup chopped dates
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix dry ingredients in mixing bowl. Add egg yolks, and mix through. Then add eggwhites, stiffly beaten, and mix through. Bake in square pan (which has been greased and floured) in slow oven. Spread batter one-half inch thick. When cool cut in squares 3 inches wide.

Picnic Frankfurters.

Take one frankfurter and wrap a strip of breakfast bacon and a slice of onion, covered with another strip of bacon and put on a fagot and hold over hot coals until bacon is crisp.

Bacon-Lettuce-Radish-Sandwiches.

Use whole-wheat bread (preferably) cut the desired thickness. Butter the slices and place radishes sliced not more than three-eighth-inch thick on one of the buttered slices, add bacon that has been broiled until crisp, lettuce free from all drops of water and cover with remaining slice of bread. Wrap in wax paper. No dressing of any kind is necessary.

Prizes Await Best Recipes For Meat Loaf

YOU ARE PASSING up a good chance to make 1 pound of meat take the place of 2 if you don't know how to prepare a meat loaf. The high price of meat has brought this version of ground meat back to the table. Then too, a cold meat loaf is the ideal dish for summer menus.

Next week The Post's recipe contest will be devoted exclusively to recipes for meat loaf. Three prizes, $3, $2 and $1, will be awarded the persons submitting the three best recipes.

Remember that a good meat loaf, whether made of ham, pork, beef or veal, must be well seasoned and perfectly blended and have a stick-to-itiveness that will permit even, uncrumbled slices.

Send all recipes to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Washington Post. Only one recipe from each contestant will be considered for a prize.

Type your recipes if possible. If not, write them neatly in ink. The name and address of the sender should appear on each sheet submitted. All recipes should be received on or before Thursday of next week.

Be careful a friend's selfish motive does not involve you in an extravagance of spending. Do not be afraid to say "No" if urged to do something you know is foolhardy, on this date, for if you should do it, keen regrets are likely to follow. In your social contacts be careful a personal dislike does not cause you to be guilty of impoliteness. It will pay to comply with any reasonable request that may be made of you June 8. Conforming to the wishes of a relative or close friend regarding some form of entertainment might be advisable, as opposition may lead to strained feelings.

Should you find yourself in a crowd on this day, do not permit yourself to get drawn into an acrimonious argument with a stranger. Married and engaged couples, and those participating in a love affair, will have to be careful, if they wish to avoid a misunderstanding, to do nothing which is likely to be construed as being dictatorial.

If a woman, and June 8 is your birthday, you are probably very intellectual. Be careful you do not sacrifice friendships for books. The love of a friend may prove of far greater value, so do not let your fondness for reading cause you to lose it through neglect. It will be to your advantage to take an active interest in things of a social nature. By mixing freely with people you may gain some distinct advantage. You should be unusually well qualified to do social welfare, or work of an educational nature, as well as demonstration lecturing. Married life is probably the most suitable for you, for you have the ability to make any man happy.

The child born on June 8 is likely, when it reaches school age, to attain distinction as a scholar. Care should be exercised to see this child takes the proper amount of physical exercise.

If a man, and June 8 is your natal day, your success will possibly be largely due to your mental attainments. Your ability to face situations requring diplomatic handling will probably also help you gain recognition. Law, politics, medicine, newspaper work, as well as lines of business which require your contacting with the buying public, should enable you to make money.

Successful people born on June 8: Samuel R. Betts, jurist. Charles A. Wickliffe, statesman. Hector Humphreys, educator. Samuel Bowles, journalist. William M. Meredith, lawyer.

American Messiahs

By the Unofficial Observer

Installment XXI—Disquiet on the Eastern Front (Part 1)

This is the twenty-first installment of "American Messiahs," by the Unofficial Observer, author of the "New Dealers," which appeared last year. While "American Messiahs" does not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post, it is commended as a most candid discussion of the mavericks, the reformers and the radio spellbinders, now booming their way across the American political stage.

As Robles sees Holt.

Broadly speaking, the means by which the business and financial interests which are summed up in the expression "Wall Street" have ruled the nation since the Civil War, have been to play off the West against the South. To do so implied their firm control of the Northeastern area—that vital quadrangle between the Potomac and Ohio Rivers, the Great Lakes and the Atlantic Ocean. The old Jacksonian Democracy—as prepared by Jefferson—ruled the Northeastern States by an alliance of the West and South which persisted down to the Civil War. The Republicans lured the West away from the South by the promise of free lands to the pioneers and since then have retained, with brief interludes, a Western allegiance which is partly based on gratitude for this past favor and partly on the memory of the four years 'struggle to overthrow the slave power and maintain an outlet to the sea down the Mississippi River.

The most suggestive feature of present-day politics is, not the temporary alliance of the West and South which is the political basis for the policies of the New Deal, but the success of progressive policies thereby engendered in splitting the East itself and carrying the social war into the Holy of Holies of American industrial capitalism.

If there are three locafities where this capitalistic imperialism has been paramount it is in the Allegheny coal fields of Pennsylvania and West Virginia, in New York City and in Massachusetts. It was Massachusetts which fought and won the war against the South (with the aid of the rest of the Northern States, to be sure, but the policy was supplied by Massachusetts). It was West Virginia which became a conquered province, torn away from the Southern Confederacy, and established as a community in which the great corporations could run wild. It was New York City which provided the most suitable administrative capital for this new economic empire created on the ruins of the conquered South and the deluded West.

Boston New York and Pittsburgh became the real seats of American power after Appomattox and have continued to exercise imperial influence in all but name ever since; Pittsburgh as the capital of iron, coal, oil and gas; New York as the capital of money and commerce and shipping; Boston as the intellectual capital, with colonies stretching up in the maritime provinces of Canada and down to the West Indies and Central America. These three, with their political hinterlands, were the rulers of America. Now they are losing the allegiance of their own citizens—perhaps only for the moment—to the New Deal. For the East is beaten, morally, and is capable of supplying no further leadership, only craftiness. Its "radical" groups are the tail to any man's kite but have no lifting capacity of their own. Their defection from the rule of Wall Street symbolizes the end of a political era and must be considered in the light of a last-minute rush for the bandwagon.

Two conspicuous events in the 1934 election had an important common factor. They were the Democratic victory in Pennsylvania—the election of a Governor and a Senator in the traditional rock-ribbed home of Joe Grundy—and the election of Rush D. Holt, aged 29, on the Democratic ticket in West Virginia. The common factor in both of these phenomena was the resurrection of the United Mine Workers under John L. Lewis and their effective seizure of political power. The mine workers alone were not responsible for the result in either case, but their influence was vital. The Pennsylvania Democrats saw the point and put an official of the U. M. W. on their ticket as candidate for lieutenant-governor. In West Virginia, the miners were the chief political element behind young Holt.

Suffered the Blessings Of an Absentee Control.

So far as the social background of the situation is concerned, suffice it to say that coal-mining, in addition to being a "sick industry" and greatly overmanned in relation to consumptive demand, has suffered the blessings of an irresponsible and absentee control, exercised by the steel industry, the banks and the railways, to an extent which has made the Pennsylvania and West Virginia coal fields (the two are continuous) one of the most depressing problem-areas of the United States. The old story: Low wages, unsanitary housing, disease, malnutrition, unemployment, strikes, deputy sheriffs and "rugged individualism" and enough of them to bank up bitter and ingrained resentment.

Although Rush Holt is not a miner, his sudden rise in the capitalistic province of West Virginia is a significant omen of the trend of the times. In a much more practical way than the Utopian, he is a product of Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward" and the literature of early post-Civil War revolt. His father, Dr. Matthew Holt (now aged 84) ran away to join the Union Army at the age of 13, but was hauled back to his father and later went to medical school, settling down as a general practitioner in the town of Weston, near Charleston, W. Va. Dr. Holt, in addition to possessing tremendous vitality and a generous soul, also had a strong social conscience. He edited a Republican paper for a time, but eventually turned Socialist, running once for Governor and twice for Senator on the Socialist ticket.

Dr. Holt was never elected to any office until, at the age of 82, he decided to run for Mayor of Weston. The "regular" machines ruled his name off the printed ballots, but he ran anyway. The voters had to write in his name, but they gave him more votes than they gave to the Democrat and the Republican combined, and he is still Mayor of Weston.

The doctor did not marry until he was 48 years old and Rush is the fourth of five children. At the age of 14 he finished high school and tried to enter the University of Cincinnati, but they wouldn't take him so he returned and went to the University of West Virginia. Later he switched to Salem College—one of those tiny denominational colleges which stud the hills of West Virginia—which gave him his A. B. degree. He taught for a couple of years and then returned to live with his family at Weston, where he helped run the family store and meat shop. He established his library in a small room above the shop and devoted himself to the study of public questions, especially to public utility legislation, between the cleaver and the ice-box, until in 1930 he felt competent to run for the West Virginia House of Delegates. He was elected and he was 25 years old.

Two days after he took his seat, he made his maiden speech and spoke again frequently throughout the session of the Legislature. His favorite topic was the regulation of public utilities and he knew more about it than anyone who dared take the floor against him in this, a utility-controlled State. During the next three years he made sensational legislative history. He attacked "absentee landlords" and "invisible government;" he drove through a resolution to investigate the large public utility corporations; he fought the sales tax unsuccessfully but forced higher taxes on the utilities; he fought political privilege and at one time blocked a compromise which would have permitted sheriffs to retain their ancient right to profiteer on the food supplied to prisoners. "Making profits on human misery is wrong and I will not compromise," he announced. What wonder that the Governor later besought him to keep "his unholy hands" off the Legislature when the State set up a Planning Council to act as funnel for Federal relief and rehabilitation funds.

As a legislator, Holt forced through the House of Delegates many progressive bills which were easily blocked in the State Senate by the interests which had become used to running the State, so he decided that he would have to continue the fight on a higher plane and went after the nomination for the United States Senate in 1934. He faced the regular Democratic machine and its chief factions, as well as all the vested interests of the State. Jim Farley backed Clem Shaver, former chairman of the Democratic national committee. Holt had the backing of the newly reorganized and militant United Mine Workers. It was enough. In the primary he beat nine candidates, six of whom were important, getting 79,000 votes, while Clem Shaver, the runner-up, got only 39,000. On national election day he won again, by 70,000 votes, over Republican Senator Henry D. Hatfield. Pathos is added to this picture by the story that the Republicans, having figures that Holt would be easier to beat than Shaver, had thrown some support to the young utility-baiter of Weston, as one of those "clever" campaign tricks which make one despair of the rudimentary intelligence of politicians.

Won in Spite of Shortcomings in Age.

Holt won in spite of the well-advertised fact that he was only 29 years old and would not become 30 until six months after his election, although the Federal Constitution requires that a Senator be 30 years of age. Holt cockily pointed out that Henry Clay had been appointed and seated in the Senate when only 29, but on the advice of George Norris and Democratic senatorial leaders, he did not risk a test of his right to sit at the opening of the 1935 session, but waited until he should reach the constitutional age. In the meantime, he established himself in his office and followed the Senate proceedings day by day.

Holt is primarily a student, who studs his speeches with facts and is not interested in the gas attack as a method of political warfare. He is a slender, bespectacled, dark-haired youth, a bachelor, whose sister acts as his hostess, and an ardent New Dealer. Progressives of the type of Norris and the La Follettes are his idols, although he hastened after his election to go to the White House and assure F. D. R. of the falsity of the utility propaganda put out to the effect that he was opposed to the New Deal. He represents a new element in national politics—the post-war generation (he was 13 when the Armistice came) and the labor reformer from the South. He is not in the least likely to go chasing after a third party candidate in 1936, unless Norris, Costigan and the La Follettes point the way and unless John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers give the word. On the other hand, he is not in the least likely to follow the primrose path of election-day liberals. At the moment, the coal interests and railways in West Virginia form a loose alliance against the hydro-electric and other utilities—for the obvious reason that coal produces freight for the railways and also electric power in steam plants—and Holt is working with them, but in the interest of mine labor and not of bondholders.

III.

Massachusetts is another story. The breeding nursery, playing grounds and kindergartens of budding capitalists center in Boston. If Boston and Massachusetts can not be held safe for capital—in spite of the indiscretion by which New England's good-will was jeopardized through the unloading of Kreuger securities to the Boston intellegentsia—then capital is lost indeed.

In New England, the most powerful potential leader of a movement toward the "left," with or without Roosevelt, is James Michael Curley, Governor of Massachusetts. So far Curley has stuck to Roosevelt closer than a brother—some brothers are not particularly clubby—and was first on the Roosevelt bandwagon in the preconvention campaign of 1931-32, and is still on it and playing the key bugle at that!

Curley is a forceful, ambitious and exceptionally eloquent man. "Back Bay" Boston and the property-owning people of the upper crust of other Massachusetts cities think him capable of anything. They look upon him much as the New Orleans aristocrats look on Huey Long. But such is Massachusetts that the curse of the "better people" has become the equivalent of a guarantee of election. It is among these "better people," rather than in the inner councils of the Democratic Party, that one hears considerable speculation upon the possibility of a Long-Curley or Olson-Curley ticket in 1936 or 1940. Such speculation fails to do justice to the ebullient successor to "Honey" Fitzgerald; if Curley considers such an alignment, he would probably put himself at the head of the ticket and Long or Olson in second place.

His record in Boston politics has been that of a succesful Irish-Catholic politician in the city which, far more than Tammany's New York, is the heaven of Irish-American politicians. He was born in Boston 61 years ago, received an education in the local grammar and high schools, entered the traditional political businesses of real estate and insurance and became head of a bank. He entered politics in 1900, by being elected to the Boston Common Council, and from this starting point his career carried him on up through the Massachusetts House of Representatives, the Boston Board of Aldermen, the Boston City Council, and two terms in Congress (1911-15). Early in his second term he resigned to become Mayor of Boston, a post in which he served three nonconsecutive terms; 1914-18, 1922-26 and 1930-34.

His career in business was as successful as his career in politics, and the atmosphere of prosperity characteristic of municipal political machines which surrounded him and his lieutenants marked him as no fanatic on the subject of clean government.

Curley's politics have always been based on the municipal machine, and only now, as Governor, is he entering the larger field of opportunity for the first time.

To become Governor he had to beat one of the most conservative Democratic machines in the country, a machine which was closely identified with the utilities, the manufacturers and mill operators of Massachusetts, who had been at pains to capture both parties for business, just as Wall street had done in its dealings with Tammany. Curley was serving his third term as Mayor when Roosevelt began to loom up as a powerful candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts was closely allied with Al Smith, Raskob and the Wall street Democrats, and David I. Walsh, senior Senator from the Bay State, was trying, as usual, to straddle the fence. Curley sized up the situation as early as 1931, boldly walked into the Roosevelt camp, and burned his bridges behind him in his public utterances. Since he and Ely were bitter enemies, Curley had no other way open to him, if he wished to rise in politics, than to find some other candidate than Al Smith to serve as an autogyro.

Yet Curley was taking a big risk in what he did. Far more than New York, Boston was the most fanatically pro-Smith city in the Nation and Curley's following was almost 100 per cent Irish Catholic. Curley himself was one of the country's leading Catholic laymen—a fact which helped him and Roosevelt, too—but even after Al came out openly against F. D. R., Curley held his ground. He took into political partnership Jimmy Roosevelt, the President's eldest son, who was also in the insurance business and was hence criticized in holier-than-thou terminology by the "best people" of Boston, and together Jimmy and the Mayor made a vigorous fight to elect Roosevelt delegates from Massachusetts. The Smith machine won, two to one, and Curley had to attend the Chicago convention as delegate from the Virgin Islands! However, when Roosevelt was nominated, Curley had won his gamble and found himself on top of the heap, with young Jim beside him.

Naturally he wanted his quid pro quo. Some of his followers took his cue and talked him up as Secretary of the Interior or Secretary of War, and when the Cabinet was filled without him his next choice was the Ambassadorship to Italy. There were, however, several million Baptist and Methodist reasons in the Democratic South why an ardent and conspicuous Catholic should not be sent to represent the American Government at Rome, and it was finally arranged that he should be offered the Ambassadorship to Poland, publicly, so that he could decline it publicly—which he did. The truth was that he never had intended to go abroad for any length of time—although he would have liked the Italian assignment for a short period—since his real objective was the Governorship of Massachusetts, from which Calvin Coolidge had been catapulted into national politics.

The conservative Democrats, led by Ely and Walsh, were in control of the State machine and held a pre-primary convention in the summer of 1934 which designated Gen. Charles H. Cole as the Democratic nominee for Governor. Cole was a good vote-getter who had come close to being elected in the great Hoover landslide of 1928. Undaunted by the choice of Cole by the convention—a procedure which usually determined the result of the primary—Curley announced himself as an independent candidate for the nomination, running on a liberal New Deal platform. In the primary, Curley, supported by his Boston machine and the fragmentary New Deal machine built up by Jimmy Roosevelt, crushed Cole and the conservative State machine by the overwhelming vote of 284,000 to 128,000. In November, Curley won again by a large margin, although a number of conservative Democrats deserted him, along with the "best people."

His program has been essentially a New Deal program. He has favored organized labor, has supported old age pensions, security and the rest of the current Roosevelt policies, and has favored work relief instead of the dole. He is obviously looking forward to Washington for, despite his 60 years, he is youthful in appearance, a large, heavily built, vigorous man, and in 1936 will probably go after the Senate seat now held by Marcus Coolidge, of Fitchburg. No one knows where he will be found if the New Deal starts to wane in the meantime.

One of the most fluent and eloquent orators in the country, Curley is a powerful factor in any political campaign. He is not likely to take a lead in splitting the Democratic Party, but if a split occurs, being Boston Irish, he will be found on the side with the best future for James Michael. Whatever the faults of his Boston machine, he has dedicated himself to an essentially liberal program and his routing of the conservative Democrats in 1934 shows the strength of liberalism in Massachusetts quite as much as it does the power of Curley's leadership. The only important qualification to his New Deal loyalty is the fact that he dislikes Roosevelt. He has supported F. D. R., but for some reason the New Deal doesn't seem to have given him all he desires. Perhaps, like other liberal leaders in conservative constituencies, he will end up by becoming one of the bulwarks of the very interests he has had to fight to achieve power.

30 Testify in Baltimore Against Power Firm

Baltimore, June 7 (AP).—More than 30 witnesses testified today before the State public service commission regarding contracts they signed and rates they paid to the Conowingo Power Co. All were from Cecil and Hartford Counties.

They testified they were "led to believe" that if they contracted for power at a special minimum rate of, in most cases, $6 monthly for two years, they would then receive power at the regular minimum rate of $1.50 monthly. They said their bills were not reduced at the end of the two-year period.

Today's testimony closed the hearing into the rates, valuation and affairs of the utility concern.

Warehousemen point out that the warehouse season lasts only five months and that earning opportunities should be lengthened to provide workers greater means to tide them over the inactive months.

U. of V. to Open New Museum For Art Today

Bayly Memorial Gallery to Receive Visitors at Commencement.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

University, Va., June 7.—The new Thomas H. Bayly Art Museum at the University of Virginia will be opened to the public for the first time during commencement exercises, it was announced today by Prof. Edmund S. Campbell, head of the school of architecture and curator of the museum.

The beautiful new art center, gift of the late Mrs. Evelyn Bayly Tiffany, of Baltimore, as a memorial to her father, Thomas H. Bayly, of Accomac, will be opened for a brief period tomorrow morning for alumni attending class reunions, and again on Monday and Tuesday for visitors to the graduation ceremonies.

Although the building itself is finished, exhibition cases and some selected pieces of the university's art treasures have not yet been installed. The permanent opening and formal dedication of the museum will take place next fall.

Rubens Subjects on Display.

Among the paintings to be displayed is the "Infant Christ and the Infant St. John," thought to be an original by Peter Paul Rubens, the gift of the late John Armstrong Chaloner, of Cobham. Several famous portraits given to the university by Mrs. Tiffany, including a painting of George Washington, by Rembrandt Peale, and two Curtis family paintings, also will be on exhibition.

The statuary group in the main lobby includes busts of President Edwin Anderson Alderman, by Sergei Konenkov; Prof. Charles W. Kent, by Charles Keck; Prof. John B. Minor, by Valentine; Prof. George Barton Rogers, by Barlett, and Edgar Allen Poe, by George Zolney.

Faculty Portraits in Gallery.

In one of the large galleries are hung portraits of members of the university faculty of the past 100 years, including William Holmes McGuffey, by E. H. Foster; A. H. Tuttle, by Duncan Smith; William Wertenbaker, by J. A. Elder; Francis H. Smith, by Lelia Smith; Albert LeFevre, by Henry Rittenburg, and Gessner Harrison, by Lelia Smith.

Part of the valuable collection of etchings given by the late John Barton Payne, as well as many of the art gifts of Paul Goodloe McIntire, of New York, also will be shown.

Mr. Bayly, in whose memory the museum is dedicated, was a student at the university two years after its opening session in 1825. He later represented Virginia in Congress, and at the time of his death in 1856 he was a brigadier general in the State militia.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., June 7.—Bothered by a severe cold during the last few days, Gov. Harry W. Nice today acted upon advice of his physician by canceling all outside engagements and remained indoors at the executive mansion to recuperate fully.

Meanwhile Gov. and Mrs. Nice are preparing to vacate the mansion tomorrow so that mechanics can proceed with remodeling and repairs, which calls for conversion of the structure from the Victorian to colonial style of architecture. Broadway Stars Turn Troupers For Good in Virginia's Hills

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 7.—Not for money but for pie and cake, honey and jam, potatoes and cabbages, 45 actors and actresses left their Broadway haunts today for the White Top Mountains of Virginia, there to prepare for the third annual season of the Abingdon "Barter Theater."

From mid-June until August, they will trek through the countryside, presenting comedies and tragedies and receiving in return the produce of the farmers they entertain.

"The actors are promised only board and room," said Robert Porterfield, the manager. "But I assure you the board is excellent. Roasting ears like they have in Virginia don't grow on Broadway."

Porterfield is concluding his role in "The Petrified Forest," which stars Leslie Howard. He is Herb, the cowboy.

His plans for this third season are ambitious. Two full companies will be on hand. One will rehearse the next show while the other presents the current attraction. He said the first show would be "March Hare," opening June 14.

About 25 per cent of the audience pay cash—35 cents is top admission—and the remainder "barters" its way into the century-old town hall where the dramas are presented. Joe Jefferson and Edwin Booth both played in the town hall during their hey-day, Porterfield said.

With Abingdon as headquarters, the troupe will journey to various towns within 70 miles in a bus known as "Bessie" to present their dramas.

Academy Set To Welcome 900 Middies

Reception Is Arranged for Large Class June 13 at Annapolis.

798 Undergraduates Off for Practice Cruise on 2 Battleships.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, June 7.—With the week passed and 798 undergraduate midshipmen embarked on the annual practice criuse, the Naval Academy today settled to its normal summer schedule, the training of second classmen and reception of the new plebe class.

The 365 members of the second class moved into the third wing of Bancroft Hall today as soon as the first and third classmen had embarked on the battleships Wyoming and Arkansas for the cruise that will take them to Scotland, Norway, Denmark and Madeira.

Classes Change Quarters.

Beginning Monday, detachments of the second class will embark on the destroyers Babbitt and Fairfax for five-day weekly training cruises in the Chesapeake Bay and the vicinity of the Virginia Capes. Those not making the cruise will study aviation, fly in the seaplanes at the Academy, study on the submarine S-20 and work in shops and laboratories.

Three Coast Guard patrol boats that had been laid up at the Curtis Bay depot, have been brought to the Academy. During the summer, members of the second class, who volunteered for the work, will overhaul the boats and engines. If they are finished in time, the midshipmen will be allowed to use them for trips on the bay.

Meanwhile preparations are underway to receive the plebes who are scheduled to begin reporting on June 13. The organization and training of the class, which is expected to reach 900 midshipmen, will occupy the summer.

The large size of the class, made so by the increase in appropriations allowing each Congressman to appoint four instead of three midshipmen, will result in larger midshipmen companies, and require additional officers and instructors. The Academy is physically equipped to handle the class without additional buildings.

Former Class Was 607.

Last summer the plebe class numbered 607, compared to 337 and 319 in the two previous years.

The midshipmen making the cruise turned out early today and carried their boxes, bags and other gear to motor launches moored along the Reina Mercedes wharf and the seawall fronting the Severn River.

Shortly before noon they formed and marched to the boats, shoving off amid waves and cheers exchanged with about 500 parents, relatives, friends and sweethearts, who were grouped along the water front. As the boats left the midshipmen gave their traditional cheer for "mothers, sisters and sweethearts."

Rear Admiral David Foote Sellers, superintendent of the Academy, with a group of parents of midshipmen as his guests, cruised about the harbor in his yacht, the Anita Clay, watching the embarkation. Rear Admiral Hayne Ellis, commanding the practice squadron, paid his respects to the superintendent before the warships dropped down the bay.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 7.—Capt. Gunyon M. Harrison, new police director, has a twofold reason for looking for a thief or thieves today.

When Joe Vizzie, proprietor of a cleaning and pressing establishment, opened his business place yesterday morning he discovered it had been robbed during the night. And among the five suits of clothes stolen was one belonging to Capt. Harrison.

New Million Goes to Roads Of 2d Class

$7,000,000 Allotted by Richmond for Year Starting July.

Primary System Gets About $5,000,000 or Same as This Year.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 7.—The State highway commission today decided to allot an additional $1,000,000 to Virginia's secondary highway system in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Henry G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, said $7,000,000 would be allotted instead of $6,000,000 in 1935-36. The additional allotment is necessary in replacing equipment purchased from the counties some years ago and which is now wearing out.

Approximately $5,000,000, the same sum allocated last year, was allocated for the State's primary highway system. He said enough construction money would be left to operate the convict road force which he termed a $3,000,000-a-year burden.

"We won't have to go in the red for the convict force in the coming fiscal year," he said, "but we may have to dig into a deficit in order to match Federal aid money."

The highway commissioner said he still had not heard from Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, whether Virginia is to receive its allocated Federal aid grant of $2,278,000 to which it would have to add an equal sum in State funds.

He did receive notice, however, that the bureau has approved Virginia's public works grant of some $7,000,000 for roads and grade crossings. The State will not need to match any part of this sum.

Allocations made by the commission were based on an estimate by John Q. Rhodes, director of the division of motor vehicles, that $17,000,000 in motor vehicle revenue, to be used for highways, will be collected in 1935-36. Of this sum, about $4,000,000 will be available for roads.

Funds for specific maintenance and construction projects will be allocated at a later meeting, the commissioner announced. The counties are now preparing statements of their local secondary highway needs.

Watchman Will Face Grand Jury in Killing

Richmond, Va., June 7 (AP).—Frank L. Williams, 24-year-old filling station watchman who shot and killed Eddie Hoffman, a Middleton, N. Y., transient, last month as the latter climbed through the window about midnight, was bound over to the Hustings Court grand jury today on a manslaughter charge.

Williams said he shot after asking the man "what do you want here?" The prosecution said Williams had no right to shoot until he had warned Hoffman. Williams said he did warn him.

More Space Needed For Guard Training

Richmond, Va., June 7 (AP).—Asserting that limited training space at Virginia Beach handicaps the Virginia National Guard, Adjt. Gen. S. G. Waller today recommended to Gov. Peery that the military reservation there be enlarged.

At the same time he said armories in Virginia cities have been improved through the use of CWA funds and money available in the State fund. The State's National Guard now numbers 3,618, he said, and will reach its full quota by August.

Receipt Taxes Show Increase For Maryland

$26,760 Is Paid Thus Far by Retailers on Sales Made in May.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., June 7.—Returns from the 1 per cent gross receipts tax for May are coming into the State comptroller's office in slightly greater volume than in April.

When the books were balanced today, 2,973 retailers had paid in $26,760.47, compared to $26,170.49 for the same period last month.

The total May collections from the emergency taxation for relief have reached $89,344.47, of which $42,584 was collected from the 1 per cent titling tax on automobiles.

The retailers have until midnight June 10 to make their May payments.

During April a total of $364,137.30 was collected from the gross receipt and tilting taxes, $31,850.43 accruing from the automobile levy.

Daniel L. Clayland 3d, in charge of the gross receipt tax collection, pointed out that approximately 5,000 retailers who received blanks in April had not paid their taxes for that month. He said investigators were working on these cases and that expected payments would swell the month's total.

"The investigators also have picked up several thousands of new retailers who did not receive returns and whose names were not on the lists of licensees we received from the offices of the clerks of courts. They included persons required to pay the tax who are not required to have a license."

CCC to Start Enrolling Men In Third Area

Army Recruiting Stations Begin Adding 41,000 on June 16.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 7.—Army recruiting stations will begin enrolling 41,000 new Civilian Conservation Corps members on June 16 in the Third Corps Area. The reenrollment of others will bring the total to 66,000 in the corps area.

Eight thousand of the men are to be concentrated at Fort Hoyle and Fort George C. Meade, then sent by special trains to the West Coast. This group will be divided into 41 companies. The others will enter the 281 camps prepared for them in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Officers for the companies going West have preceded the men and are engaged in preparing details for their arrival, Army officials said.

Two Camps in District.

The 41,000 new men are to be organized as rapidly as possible into 161 companies. A different system will be used this time in getting enrollers to camp. Instead of being formed into companies before going to camp, the men will proceed direct from the recruiting stations to their assigned posts.

The present authorized CCC strength of the corps area is 34,000 men. Recruits and reenrollments will nearly double it. Army officials pointed out that the companies are not at full strength at present, as about 10,000 have found employment and been released.

Nine of the 281 camps have not been assigned. Those already located and ready to receive their quotas total 139 in Pennsylvania, 95 in Virginia, 36 in Maryland and 2 in the District of Columbia.

Enlisting quotas assigned to States by military officials, including juniors, veterans and local enrolled men, are 33,116 for Pennsylvania, 3,415 for Virginia, 3,496 for Maryland and 1,560 for the District of Columbia.

Code Is Kept By Virginia Till June 16

Labor Chief Charges Richmond Firms Cut Pay, Lengthen Hours.

Names Four Companies; Their Officials Make Statements.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., June 7.—Coincident with Attorney General A. P. Staples' ruling today that the State NRA law applies to intrastate commerce until June 16 came the assertion of R. T. Bowden, a former president of the Virginia Federation of Labor, that several Richmond manufacturing plants had cut wages and increased working hours since the Supreme Court upset the national recovery act.

Naming four firms which he said had violated code provisions, Bowden said he expected others to join the "parade."

Specifically he asserted that:

1. The Wortendyko Manufacturing Co. had cut employes of the twine department 2 cents an hour in pay and had added one hour to the work day, and that employes of the bag department had one hour added to the work day.
2. The Sitterding-Carneal-Davis Co., Inc., had lengthened the work-week from 40 to 50 hours.
3. The David M. Lee Co. had cut salaries 10 per cent.
4. The Miller Manufacturing Co. had increased hours of work and had eliminated extra pay for overtime.

Lay Off Workers.

Bowden said some of the firms in lengthening the work day were paying their employes for the extra work but were thereby able either to lay off workers or to avoid taking on more workers. This practice, Bowden asserted, is contrary to the spirit of the President's recovery plan.

John S. Christian, president of Sitterding-Carneal-Davis, said this company lengthened its work week in order to take care of seasonal demands until September 1 and intends to go back to the 40-hour week in September. He said an application made to John J. Corson 3d, State NRA compliance officer, prior to the invalidation of the codes had received favorable consideration.

No Comment to Make.

Henry Taylor, of the Miller Manufacturing Co., said he had no comment to make publicly on reports that this company had increased hours of work and eliminated extra pay for overtime.

Officials of the David M. Lea Co. denied reports that the company had cut salaries. He said, however, the company was not voluntarily abiding by the code.

Attorney General Staples' ruling was handed down in response to an inquiry of the State division of purchase and printing. "The law has not been repealed in Virginia," he said. "It is law until it expires."

The law was passed during the extra session of 1933 to strengthen the national recovery act and to extend the codes to industries operating entirely within the boundaries of Virginia.

Fox Film Corporation Steps Up Among Leaders With Imposing Release Schedule

Fifty-four Is Number of Big Films on List

Does Not Include Zanuck's Newlyweds Here at Earle; Amusement Notes.

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Out of the recent Chicago sales convention of the Fox Film Corporation has come the announcement that, exclusive of the production schedule of Twentieth Century Pictures, Inc., recently merged with Fox, plans for 1935-36 releases contemplate the distribution of 54 feature-length pictures, 110 short-reel subjects and 104 issues of the Fox Movietone News, probably the most improved reel of current events now being shown the public.

A new trend toward spectacular productions and an increased use of music are revealed in the new program.

Pictures of a spectacular nature will embrace "Dante's Inferno," Eugene Sue's "Mysteries of Paris," Ouida's "Under Two Flags," "Ramona," "Hawk of the Desert," "'Way Down East" and the film version of the stage play that opened last season at the National Theater in this city, "The Farmer Takes a Wife."

One-fourth With Music.

Almost a full 25 per cent of the 54 pictures of feature-length listed for production will utilize songs and instrumental music, among these being "Redheads on Parade," "Argentina," "Here's to Romance," "The Dressmaker" and "Broadway Co-ed."

While more than a fifth of the tentative productions will be produced from original stories written directly for the screen, which indicates an increasing demand by producers for original camera material, there will be many other films based on the works of a long list of contemporary authors, among them Booth Tarkington, Kathleen Norris, Clarence Budington Kelland, Sophie Kerr, Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr., Vina Delmar, Ben Lucien Burman, Courtney Riley Cooper, Zane Grey and others. Still other productions will be fashioned from famous theatrical successes.

New personalities added to the Fox roster of players this season include Nino Martini, Metropolitan Opera and radio star; Tutta Rolf, Scandinavian movie, stage and opera star; Tito Guizar, popular radio barytone; Simone, vivacious star of both British and French motion pictures during the past year, and Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink, who will make her screen debut in "Here's to Romance."

Old Reliables Head Stars.

Will Rogers, Shirley Temple, Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter head the Fox roster of 54 stars and featured players who will be seen in next year's product.

The 50-odd pictures scheduled for production during the immediately ensuing months will be divided among seven producers—exclusive of Darryl Zanuck's Twentieth Century staff—this diceman's group consisting of Winfield Sheehan, vice president and general manager of production; Sol Wurtzel, Jesse L. Lasky, Robert T. Kane, B. G. De Sylva, Edward Butcher and John Stone.

If the plans formulated at the Chicago convention are only fragmentarily realized, Fox still will be one of the most formidable producing organizations in the field.

In the closing of the National Theater Players' "little season" tomorrow night, Washington theatergoers will be deprived of the pleasure of enjoying the work of one of the most competent "second women" the company ever has had. This could mean no one but Ruth Lee, who, during the six weeks of the current season, never has failed to give a letter-perfect performance on opening night and maintain the excellence of her pretending throughout the week.

Another capable actress is being robbed of due credit for a splendid performance this week through the inadvertent omission of her name from the program. This would be the brunette and extremely personable Eleanor Phelps, who appears in support of Ethel Barrymore in Zoe Atkins' "Declassee" in the role of Zellita.

The original company of Players that started the season now is pretty well scattered. Nancy Sheridan and Roy Roberts have gone to the Elitch Garden Stock Company, in Denver, and Forrest Orr and Raymond Bramley will next be seen by patrons of the summer theater in Skowhegan, Me.

Newlyweds Are Here.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddy Duchin, who were married in New York City day before yesterday, will make Washington the first stop on the long "honeymoon" jaunt both will make during Duchin's appearances on a coast-to-coast tour of the Firechief's Orchestra. Duchin and his radio instrumentalists open at the Earle today as headliners of the stage portion of the bill assembled for Shriners' Week.

Mrs. Duchin is the former Marjorie Oelrichs, New York society girl. The wedding was solemnized in the apartment of her mother in the Hotel Pierre.

It has been reported that the couple were to spend a honeymoon "somewhere in the West," but the bridegroom's stage and radio contract calls for his appearance on a national tour for at least 16 weeks, beginning today in this city. Even so, this is a little west of New York! They will arrive in the Capital at 7:15 this morning and will stop at the Carlton.

New Folio on Way.

Some time during Eddy Duchin's week at the Earle, the young pianist-director—he is 26 years old—will see the first published copy of "Eddy Duchin's Pianostyles," put out by the Remick Music Corporation.

Pianists will be interested to know that this folio contains transcriptions of Remick's most popular "standard" melodies, arranged by Duchin in the manner that has made his artistry at the keyboard nationally known.

Among the songs are "Memories," "Japanese Sandman," "Harvest Moon," "Chinatown" and various others.

The first film release dealing with the prevalent chain-letter craze will be presented, beginning today, as an added feature on the Earle's screen program. This is an item bearing the title of "Chain Letter Dimes," in which Pete Smith, the inimitable commentator on any and all subjects, X-rays the fad and drops pearls of wisdom and humor in the doing of it.

Extra Matinee Today.

Graciously yielding to a bona-fide and insistent public demand, Ethel Barrymore has consented to play an extra matinee of Zoe Atkins' "Declassee" this afternoon.

When Miss Barrymore, week before last, appeared as guest star at the National in W. Somerset Maugham's "The Constant Wife," every matinee performance was completely sold out.

When "Declassee," with Miss Barrymore once again starred in the role which she created in 1919, was announced for this week ticket lines again formed at the box office windows and within 48 hours every ticket for the regular matinees had been sold.

Apprised of this extraordinary personal popularity and of the fact that keenly disappointed prospective patrons were being turned away from the ticket wickets, Miss Barrymore readily consented to play today's extra afternoon performance.

The regular matinee scale of prices assessed throughout the season of the National Players will, of course, prevail.

Carey Lucas and Ralph Fowler, leading woman and hero of "After Dark," the Roadside Theater's initial attraction for their second summer season, opening on Monday, June 17, will do the Josephine Hutchinson and Pat O'Brien roles, respectively, in "Oil for the Lamps of China," in a 15-minute radio dramatization of the film which comes to the Earle Theater on Friday, June 14. Miss Lucas, who has supplanted Ruth Hartrick in the role of Eliza, and Mr. Fowler, will be making a pre-season "appearance," since the broadcast is scheduled for Tuesday, June 11, from 10:30 to 10:45 p. m., over Station WJSV. Marvin Beers, who took part in the company's first broadcast of a Warner picture, "Ruggles of Red Gap," is directing.

Shooting at the Moon!

Announcements have reached this desk that Loew's Fox and Palace theaters will present "Shriner Special Shows" each night during the national convention, to be held here beginning Sunday.

These late shows will begin at both houses at 11:30 p. m. Only the screen features of the daily bills will be presented at these midnight performances, the feature at the Fox being "Public Hero No. 1," with Lionel Barrymore, Chester Morris and Joseph Calleia, and Will Rogers in "Doubting Thomas" at the Palace.

Similar provision for stayers-up-laters has been made for this Saturday night at the Belasco, where "The Unfinished Symphony," with Helen Chandler, Hans Jaray and Marta Eggerth, will be unspooled, also beginning at 11:30 p. m. The complete screen bill will be screened, short subjects and feature, the latter going on at 12:04 a. m.

No Dice Last Time.

I hate to be the one to throw the cold water, but the theaters made the same provision for the visiting hordes at the time of the last Shrine convention here in 1923 and were chagrined to discover that all of their elaborate preparations had been in vain. None of the Shriners came in!

Even Col. James J. Lake, down at the Gayety, sensing a demand for gay midnight entertainment—or thinking he did—arranged with performers, stage hands, musicians and house staff to stay on duty for an extra midnight performance every night of the seven the convention was in session. And how did he come out? He not only lost that essential piece of wearing apparel, his shirt, but his other shirt as well!

Of course, conditions and the Shriner's point of view may have changed completely in the intervening 12 years, but that was the experience of the town's most astute showmen a dozen years ago and you can verify it by asking any of them still in the game.

The Shriners, on these national conclaves, just seem not to be gaited to any indoor entertainment that they do not supply themselves.

Let us hope this year will be different.

Meteorological Note No. 2.

So I left the raincoat home to cover "Escape Me Never," at RKO-Keith's, and it rained a half-inch of exceedingly wet water in ten minutes!

Old Jupiter Pluvius took that title just a little too seriously!

Two Who Will Charm the Shriners

The smiling artiste above at left will be immediately recognized by all seasoned theatergoers as Billie Burke, one of the most charming actresses known to stage or screen. She appears opposite Will Rogers in "Doubting Thomas," beginning today on the screen at Loew's Palace. At right above is a likeness of Helen Chandler, looking quite as wistful as she does most of the time in "The Unfinished Symphony," now in its third week on the screen at the Belasco Theater and well worth anyone's time and money.

Mistrial Declared In Operation Case

Colored Doctor Free on Bail as Jury Is Hung.

By the Associated Press.

Yorktown, Va., June 7.—With the jury unable to agree after a dozen ballots, Judge Frank Armistead today declared a mistrial in the case of Dr. Nelson F. McNorton, colored physician who is charged with performing a criminal operation on Mrs. Dorothy Reeves.

As the doctor, free under $3,500 bond pending the new trial in the York County Circuit Court June 24, left the courtroom, he was served with papers naming him as the defendant in a $10,000 suit for damages brought by relatives of the girl.

In its instructions the court had said McNorton might be sentenced to from 5 to 20 years in the penitentiary if the jury believes he was responsible for the death of the woman.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., June 7.—Headed by the Rev. Ed. L. Miller, and the Rev. John Locke, a delegation of Mauretown, Shenandoah County, women, protested against granting a permit to sell alcoholic beverages of greater than 3.2 strength to Ed Konk, who operates a lunchroom across the highway from the church, with the result that Wade Miles, referee, has returned to Richmond to file recommendations in the matter. The objections centered chiefly on the proximity of the stand of the church.

Konk filed a petition signed by a number of persons asking that the permit be approved. A delegation from Bluemont, Loudoun County, portested issuance of a similar license to a woman there.

In Lee District, however, where the incumbent, E. E. Jones, is being opposed by Clarence E. Brannock for nomination of county supervisor, a primary probably will be held.

Candidates who have filed with county chairman who will be unopposed are as follows: County treasurer, Luther G. Sheetz; commissioner of revnue, Lester J. Hottle; county clerk, Park Smith; Commonwealth attorney, Phillip Williams; sheriff, Wilbur F. Lambert, and House of Delegates, Newton W. Borden.

Annapolis, Md., June 7 (AP).—Myron McLaren, who resigned as assistant professor of psychology at St. John's College following a dispute over a student's marks for graduation, said today the faculty did not propose to deny the student a degree.

It simply voted that Robert N. Sosman, of Westfield, N. J., receive no degree until such time as he should pass the comprehensive examination that all seniors are required to take, McLaren said. Amos W. W. Woodcock, president of the institution, was said to have "over-ridden" the faculty, and Sosman graduated with the rest of the class. The psychology professor then resigned.

Rusty Sword Hooked Along With Catfish

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Williamsport, Md., June 7.—Potomac River catfish, declares Lester Kreps, are arming themselves with swords. Kreps told this story last night and brought back the evidence.

Fishing from a boat, he had landed a sizable string of fish and was preparing to go home when he hooked another. On landing the fish, he also hauled in a rust-encrusted sword, probably lost by a Civil War soldier fording the river. The fish, after being hooked, apparently swam through the handle of the sword, tying the line about the hilt.

Virginians Oppose Guffey Coal Bill

Operators to Seek Votes of State Delegation.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., June 7.—Southwestern Virginia coal operators are solidly against the Guffey bill which would regulate production, it was declared today by C. W. Bondurant, Lee County operator, who urged mine workers, operators and others to inform Virginia's Representatives and Senators of their opposition to the measure. Bondurant makes his home in Bristol.

"The entire southwestern Virginia field is bitterly opposed to the Guffey bill," said Bondurant. "It has more than one fault. We feel that it would give Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia fields business that Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee mines would have taken away from them on account of quality coal, especially Virginia coal."

He said the coal operators want a code with real teeth in it to save the situation caused by the abandonment of NRA. The operators have a committee at Washington working with Representative John W. Flannagan, jr., of the Ninth District, and the Virginia Senators, he said, in opposition to the Guffey measure.

Suspect Exonerated In Ellison Killing

Failure of fingerprints to tally yesterday led Justice Department officials to exonorate Dewey Alvin Lamm, alias Lane, 23, arrested at Petersburg, Va., in the murder May 30, near Oilsville, Va., of James M. Ellison, manager of a Petersburg estate.

Lamm's fingerprints were sent to Washington for comparison with those found in Ellison's car after it was abandoned in Richmond by one or more hitch-hikers suspected in the crime.

Dispatches from Petersburg indicated Lane would be held for alleged violation of the Dyer act by transportation of a stolen car from North Carolina to Virginia.

VERA Assigns $150,000 More To June Relief

Richmond Allots $1,025,237 but This Is Much Below April Total.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, June 7.—Virginia communities will have a total of $1,025,237 to spend on general residential relief functions during June, and this sum is now being allocated to the counties and cities of the State, Administrator William A. Smith of the VERA has announced.

Meanwhile, the reemployment campaign inaugurated on the first of the month is being pushed throughout the State with all possible dispatch, and relief officials have expressed the hope that smaller relief allotments will be necessary in the immediate future, as large numbers of relief families are placed in jobs in private employment.

Job finding committees composed of volunteer workers serving without pay have been established in practically every city and county of the State to aid in the development of work opportunities for persons on the relief rolls. Tangible results of their efforts are expected to be reflected shortly in gradual diminution of local relief rolls.

The June relief allocations, based on estimates prepared the latter part of last month, total approximately $150,000 greater than allocations for May, but well over $500,000 less than those for April. The sum is segregated as follows: General relief program, $737,237; administrative costs and local special programs, $166,000; rural rehabilitation, $86,000.

Thomas Adds 73 to Gain 2-Stroke Lead Over Krueger in Open

Nats Hammer A's Hurlers; Win, 11-6

Come From Behind With Six-Run Rally in Seventh Inning.

Kuhel's Triple Helpful; Pettit Holds Macks After Bean Fails.

By Shirley L. Povich.

WHEN the Athletics went into the seventh inning yesterday with a 5-2 lead, it was all over but the clouting—the clouting of the Nats whose bats began to belch base-hits with such continuity that six Washington runs came clattering over the plate.

That wasn't all. They bombarded Johnny Marcum, the fourth Philadelphia pitcher, for three more runs in the ninth. The upshot of it all, when the full returns were in, was an 11-6 victory for the Nats, their third straight.

It was amid the shrieking of the 6,000 ladies' day fans that the Nats fell upon Bill Dietrich, who had restrained them to two runs in the first six innings. The A's had pummeled Belve Bean from the box in the sixth and were riding high in the comfort of their 5-2 lead when the Nats began to bestir themselves.

Ossie Bluege instituted the seventh-inning proceedings against Dietrich with a single to left field and Pettit, who was permitted to bat for himself, obliged Manager Harris with a lucky, wind-blown single back of third base. The first man out in the inning was Dietrich, himself. Manager Connie Mack waved him out of there when Joe Kuhel connected for the really important blow of the session, a long triple to the right field corner that scored Bluege and Pettit and put the tying run on third.

In came George Caster to pitch to Manush and walk him. But the score was tied when Kuhel scored from third as Myer's grounder forced Manush. Cecil Travis barked Warstler's shins with a single and the bases were full when Powell walked. Johnny Stone met the issue at this point by driving a sharp single to center that scored Myer and Travis. Caster retired Bolton on a short fly to center, but when Bluege, up for the second time, walked to fill the bases, Mack got Caster out of there.

Pettit Is Walked.

It was Leroy Mahaffey who was responsible for the Nats' sixth run of the inning. He walked the weak-hitting Pettit to force a run across the plate.

Entrusted with holding the Nats' 6-to-6 lead, Pettit yielded the Athletics only one run in the last three innings, but in the eighth the Nats staked him to three more runs. Manush single to center and consecutive bunts by Myer and Travis had Marcum floundering around the infield like a fish out of water. They went as hits and the bases were filled. When Powell beat out a hit to Foxx, a run scored and Bolton drove two more home on his single over second base.

Johnson Hits No. 14.

Back in the first inning, Bob Johnson's fourteenth home run of the season gave the A's a 2-0 lead against Bean. Moses had started the game with a single and Johnson's homer sailed into the center-field bleachers after he had worked the count to three and two. The Nats protested vigorously that the third ball called by Umpire McGowan had ticked Johnson's bat, but McGowan was sustained by Umpire Summers.

The Nats replied with one run in the first inning after Kuhel and Travis had singled, and they tied the score in the fourth when Bean's long double to the center-field wall scored Bluege, who had singled with two out.

But Bean's gallop on the base paths apparently did his health no good. He was touched for a run in the fourth when Moses singled and Cramer doubled to give the A's a 3-2 lead, and the fifth found him laboring in the midst of a three-run uprising when Pettit was rushed to his relief. One run had already scored and against Pettit Cramer singled to right to boost the A's lead to 5-2.

That's what the score was when things began happening in the seventh.

Red Sox Best Yanks, 2-1, In Duel

Victors Bunch Four Hits in Fourth for Deciding Runs.

Boston, June 7 (AP).—A fusillade of three doubles and a single in the fourth inning spoiled a well-pitched game for Johnny Broaca today and enabled the Red Sox to take a 2-to-1 decision from the American League leaders.

Each team made only seven hits and Broaca and Johnny Welch hooked up in a flinging duel, but after the Yanks had scored in the fourth Joe Cronin belted a double, Carl Reynolds drove him in with a base hit and Rick Ferrell and Babe Dahlgren followed with two-baggers for the odd run.

Coaching School Is Slated at Duke

Six-Day Classes Are Set to Open on July 15.

Durham, N. C., June 7.—Duke University's annual school for coaches will be held for six days this summer, July 15 to 20.

Started by Wallace Wade when he came here from Alabama in 1931, the school attracted 115 mentors that year, 119 in 1932, 120 in 1933 and reached an all-time high last year when 200 coaches from 17 States, including 17 college and university mentors, attended.

In addition to the football course, there will be full courses in basket ball, track training and boxing offered by the coaches of these sports at Duke University.

Golfer Mangrum Weds Girl He Met In Open Practice

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, June 7.—Lanky Ray Mangrum, the California golf star, is spending his honeymoon on the links of Oakmont, scene of the National Open championship.

His marriage to Margaret Gordon, of Oakmont, after a speedy courtship was disclosed today.

Mangrum came to Pittsburgh a couple months ago to try solving some of Oakmont's complex problems. It was there that he met Miss Gordon. The ceremony was performed Wednesday night at nearby Greensburg.

The bride said it was love at first sight, adding:

"We saw each other all the time after that first day."

The bridal pair had a real "best man"—Alvin Krueger, of Wisconsin, who topped the field with a sub-par 71 in the first round.

NEW YORK, June 7 (AP).—Seeking the right to enroll his name alongside that of Sir Barton and Gallant Fox, the only horses ever to win the "Big Three" of the American turf, William Woodward's Omaha, victor in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness, will oppose five other 3-year-olds in the sixty-seventh running of the $50,000 Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park tomorrow.

At 1½ miles, a distance considered more to his liking than any race he has run this year, the chestnut son of Gallant Fox ruled the 3-to-5 choice to turn the tables on William Dupont's Rosemont, which took the measure of the Woodward flier in the Withers mile.

No Excuses Loom.

Since finishing second in the Withers two weeks ago, Omaha has been going along steadily. If beaten he should have no excuse, as the field is small and the stretches long and wide, giving him plenty of time and room to swing into his ground-eating strides.

Rosemont figures to be the horse for Omaha to beat on the basis of his fine showing in the Withers, in which he held the favorite at bay during a long stretch drive. Some horsemen consider the Du Pont colt a doubtful stayer at the distance, however, and are picking Walter M. Jeffords Firethorn' fast-closing second to Omaha in the Preakness, as the one that will furnish the main contention.

Vanderbilt Colt Threat.

If workouts mean anything, Alfred G. Vanderbilt will have a capable representative in Cold Shoulder, which went the full route in the sensational time of 2:29 3-5, only a second back of the American record, earlier in the week. Woodward also has entered Sir Beverly as a running mate for Omaha, but he is considered a doubtful starter, while the other nominee, Alvin Untermyer's Gold Foam is strictly an outsider.

A victory for Omaha would boost the colt's earnings close to $110,000, as the race will have a value of $48,230.

Helen Moody In Net Final In Britain

Trounces Billy Yorke in Straight Sets; Faces Mrs. Pittman.

By the Associated Press.

WEYBRIDGE, England, June 7. Unleashing a powerful attack that was reminiscent of the old days, Helen Wills Moody crushed Billy Yorke, English girl, 6—1, 6—4, today and stormed her way into the final round of the St. George's Hill Tennis Tournament.

What must have sounded like sweet, familiar music in the ears of the former world champion were the gasps of astonishment and the continuous applause as she swept Miss Yorke aside and qualified to meet Mrs. Elsie Goldsack Pittman, last year's winner, for the title tomorrow.

First Since 1933.

It was evident from the enthusiasm which her latest victory engendered that Mrs. Moody still occupies a large spot in the hearts of British tennis fans despite her two-year absence from competition. This tournament is the first in which she has played since a back injury forced her to default to Helen Jacobs in the final round of the American championship in 1933.

For the first time this week, Helen appeared to have full confidence in her game and regaled the crowd with a beautiful repertoire of strokes. The length and speed of her shots down the sidelines often made Miss Yorke appear helpless for as many as five or six consecutive points.

The Californian hit one streak of wildness in the second set, permitting her English rival to take a 3-1 lead, but Mrs. Moody quickly regained control of the situation. Miss Yorke, a chop-stroke artist, started out by dropping tantalizers just over the net, but Mrs. Moody stopped all that by charging in fast and killing three of these in a row.

Cruickshank Far Back at Oakmont

A Staff Correspondent.

Oakmont Country Club, Oakmont, Pa., June 7.—Bobby Cruickshank, thrice on the threshold of National Open champions, must make an herculean comeback tomorrow if he hopes to finish among the leaders in the thirty-ninth open even here.

Cruickshank has 78-76—14. He had a 36, one under par, going out, but took 40 strokes on the inward voyage. Again it was the story of Bobby not being able to control his new woods, which were borrowed from Jimmy Thomson especially for the occasion.

Ralph Beach, of Suburban, Baltimore, ble wup and took an 86. He has 163. Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., former Virginia Open and Amateur champion, playing with Horton Smith, registered 81-86—167.

Scores Soar As Wind Hits Oakmont

Sarazen Falters After Brilliant Start, Is Third With 149.

Mackenzie, Victim of Storm, Slumps With Round of 82.

By Dave Herman.

A Staff Correspondent.

OAKMONT COUNTRY CLUB, Oakmont, Pa., June 7.—Jimmy Thomson, broad shouldered, curly haired, 28-year-old Long Beach, Calif., golfer, acclaimed the longest driver in the world, used his titantic wallops to good advantage over Oakmont's course today, and made a carbon copy of his opening day round of 73 to assume a two-stroke lead at the half-way mark of the National Open Championship.

With 36-holes of grueling golf remaining, Thomson tonight found his 146, two over par, the largest at which more than 60 qualifiers will shoot at tomorrow in a do or die effort to overhaul the stocky, stolid 190-pounder who learned his golf on a Washington, D. C., golf course.

Thomson thanked his lucky stars that he played his round with a burning sun beating down on his brow, and under conditions that were delightfully ideal. He went out early in the morning, and shortly after noon had bounced into the lead.

Krueger Back to Second.

Al Krueger, of Beloit, Wis., the golf pro in the afternoon and semi-pro baseball player at night, who paced the field with a remarkable sub-par 71 after yesterday's firing, 148. Krueger shot a 77, five over dropped back to second place with par, after going out in 37, perfect figures. He cracked on the stretch, the strain began to tell, and his best was a 40.

Clinging tenaciously to third place was the copper-skinned Italian shotmaker, the Latin from Manhattan, Gene Sarazen, who added a 74 to his first day score of 75 to trail Krueger by one stroke.

Followed by a tremendous morning gallery, Sarazen came to grief on one hole—the 477-yard ninth—where he took seven shots to blast his chances for tying the fast-flying Thomson. It was a big blow to Sarazen, who needed a birdie for a 33, a par for a 34, yet he finished that side in 36, one under par. But the odds-on favorite was guilty of four fives on the back nine and his best was a 38.

Thomson, Krueger and Sarazen were the only golfers in a field of 157 able to crack 150. Midway of the afternoon (3:30 daylight saving time, to be exact), a terrible thunderstorm broke, a howling wind which had whipped the course for several hours gained momentum on the wings of the pelting rain, and with all this went the hopes of dozens of prospective champions, the hopes of three Washington golfers, who were impressive in their debuts yesterday.

Mackenzie Blows Up.

A dejected young man late this evening was Roland Mackenzie, 28-year-old District pro, a victim of circumstances. Mackenzie was one stroke back of Krueger at the end of yesterday's play, but today he blew up with the wind and rain and came home with a disastrous 82, a far cry from the beautiful round he carved out on Thursday.

But Mackenzie, despite the crack up, is only eight strokes from the pace setter Thompson and a return to form tomorrow may find him still a dangerous contender. He has a 36-hole total of 154.

Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam, another Washington entry, who carded an opening day score of 78, was caught in the downpour and shot an 82 for a 155 total.

Sixty-six golfers with scores of 161 or better made the grade for tomorrow's 36 hole play—36 holes of golf calculated to make or break the leaders.

Many of the hot shots were relegated to the side lines, as a result of dismal shooting, but you can blame a good bit of it on the weather.

The day's biggest disappointment was the collapse of Tommy Armour, of Chicago, the dour Scot who has won every national championship of importance. Entering today's round with a 74 to his credit, Armour, who

District Trio In Last 36 at Oakmont

Mackenzie, Houghton and Spencer Remain as Walper Bows Out.

By a Staff Correspondent.

OAKMONT COUNTRY CLUB, Oakmont, Pa., June 7.—Three of the District of Columbia's four entrants in the National Open golf championship qualified for tomorrow's 36-hole grind, after each had posted an 82, ten over par, today.

Roland Mackenzie, of Congressional, who won the medal in the National Amateur here ten years ago, has 72-82—154; Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam, 73-82—155, and Al Houghton, of Kenwood, 78-82—160.

Leo Walper, Bethesda driving range professor, despite an eagle three on the first hole, had 85-87—172—too much for this fast company of golfers.

Unfortunately, the three District qualifiers played most of the time in a driving rain. Under normal conditions they probably could have done better.

Mackenzie took a six on the start-

Golfers Caught in the Middle at Oakmont As Committee, Clubmakers Vie for Honors

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

OAKMONT COUNTRY CLUB, Pittsburgh, Pa., June 7.—The tournament of the galloping jitters here has now passed the second day, or incubation period, and the crisis is practically at hand. This department spent a pleasant and profitable morning stumbling after yesterday's hero, Alvin Kreuger, of Beloit, Wis., alias Needlenose Nonnan, alias Red Kreuger, alias Butch McSlugg, alias Ivar Kruger, the Swedish match king.

I do not think that Needlenose will be posing for the cameras, or listening to the speeches of the committeemen when this is all over, but the leader for the first round is always a good story, especially when his name happens to be "Red," or "Butch," and also when he happens to be as smooth and steady a golfer as Kreuger.

Mr. Kreuger, who had a 71 yesterday, had a 77 today, but by no stretch of the imagination could one say that he had blown up. A 77 isn't an explosion on this course. In case you want to know why this great field isn't smashing par around here it is because the tournament, or paper par is listed at 72, but actually the way it plays and is laid out, it is a par 75.

This Open championship is getting to be a curious and practically endless race between club tournament committees and manufacturers of golf equipment, with the players caught neatly in the middle. The tournament committees try to stiffen up their courses so that par can not be cracked and so that it will look as if they and their members had the greatest and stiffest course in the country.

The professionals and the clubmakers then design and manufacture equipment to meet this "beefing up" or "supercharging" of a course, so that the professionals can maintain their standards, and the race goes merrily on. The sand traps down here are all ribbed and grooved, with the grooves running across the hole. One of the golf companies has sent a new dynamiter down here. Dutra played it, and said:

"Hell, I laugh at the traps with this club. I'll get 'em out and get distance, too."

As one golf expert said at a gabfest last night, the public isn't fooled by the high scores. It doesn't stand to reason that a group of professional players who have been touring the courses of the country in anywhere from 66 to 70

Capital Jockey Up, Star Queen Triumphs at Charles Town

Filly Sprints In Stretch To Win

Owned by D.C. Woman; Corner Boy Second; Double Hits Low.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 7.—Eddie Smith, the Northeast Washington boy who plies a saddle trade, scored an all-District victory today in "The Charleston," named for the city that is always confused with this town. Smith gave Star Queen, the property of Mrs. T. J. Donohue, who makes her home in the Capital, a fine ride to defeat six of the better horses here over the Charles Town course, at about six furlongs.

Corner Boy, a long-shot belonging to J. L. Coyle, was second, and Small Change, representing Bowes Bond, was third. The race was run in 1:19 2-5 over a track that was fast with the exception of a few heavy spots.

The 4-year-old filly, which derived its name from its parents, Queen's Guild and Little Star, was allowed to settle in her stride while Stopl Pigeon and Small Change did the chief front running. On the back stretch, Smith asked Star Queen for speed and she slowly, but surely wore down Small Change, Stool Pigeon having drifted back in the meanwhile.

Late Bid Is Futile.

Corner Boy was in more switches than a yard engine during the trip around, but Jockey Quigley finally found racing room on the inside and set out to catch Star Queen in the stretch, missing by half a length. Small Change hung on for the third money.

The daily double set a new low for the meeting. Eddie Smith had a hand in the double, riding Good Sense from far back in the field in the first race. Johnny Shanks put on the finishing touches with Clifton's Agnes in the third race. The combination bet was a mere $17.40. Although the general mutuel play for the day fell off along with the crowd, $2,100 was invested in the twin wager.

The weather was ideal for the sport, but the attendance, as is usual here on Friday, was the smallest of the week. Well-played horses scored in the majority of the contests.

Washington's jockeys won the first six races on the program. Johnny Shanks won three, Eddie Smith two and Pee Wee Quattlebaum one.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAG BEARER, $6.30, $3.60, $2.60; QUEEN VIC, $3.70, $2.60; GREAT LOVER, $2.60.

FLAG BEARER went to the front in the first sixteenth, drew clear and, under punishment all the last quarter-mile, lasted to hold QUEEN VIC safe. The latter, in close pursuit most of the winner most of the way, moved up on the outside in the stretch and just failed to be up in time. GREAT LOVER, well placed all the way, saved ground at the stretch turn and fought it out courageously to the end. BALMACAN closed some ground. PROTRACTOR, away well, dropped back in the first sixteenth and was unable to improve his position thereafter. ENERGETIC BOY was always far back. JUDGE PEAK was never prominent.

FOURTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:59. Winner, E. A. McMann's b. g. (4), by Durbar II—Mary and Maud. Trained by H. C. Cornwall. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:08 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BENARES, $5.70, $3.90, $3.30; BRIDE ELECT, $9.40, $6.40; DOVE OF PEACE, $5.20.

BENARES, slow to begin and outrun until nearing the stretch, came with a rush on the inside through the stretch and was up right at the end. BRIDE ELECT came wide into the stretch and, closing stoutly out past the middle of the track, just missed. DOVE OF PEACE displayed good speed, opened up a good lead, but was unable to keep pace through the closing furlong. MINNA was well up all the way and moved into position ground. BILLY WISE moved into contention with a rush on the outside, but faltered in the last three-sixteenths. ST. NICK faltered after showing early speed. FIRE REEL was never prominent.

FIFTH RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:20. Off at 4:20½. Winner, W. G. Merion's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DELIBERATE, $3.80, $3.20, $2.80; ARMFUL, $6.90, $3.70; DRAWN SWORD, $2.10.

DELIBERATE went to the front at once, sprinted clear in the opening sixteenth and, tiring in the last sixteenth, barely lasted to hold ARMFUL safe. The latter, in closest attendance all the way, lunged for it practically all the way, closed gamely and was wearing the winner down fast at the end. DRAWN SWORD, unable to keep pace early, came stoutly in the drive. BROWBEATEN, well placed, was unable to keep pace in the drive. The others were never prominent.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,500. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:53½. Off at once. Winner, Col. W. A. Jones' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAXEN, $14.10, $5.70, $3.20; POCKET, $7.50, $3.50; HONEY SWEET, $2.80.

FLAXEN worked her way up gradually, came through on the inside of HONEY SWEET in the stretch to take command and held POCKET afterwards. POCKET, well placed from start, responded gamely to pressure and closed willingly. HONEY SWEET displayed good speed, though faltering slightly in the closing test. KOW TOW tired. TOP HIGH was unable to improve her position. PROPAGANDIST was far back all the way. ANNARITA tired badly.

Charles Town Race Track, June 7.

Dear Al:

The Jockeys-Who-Have-Been-Suspended-A. C. had only seven eligible players this morning, but it will be able to put a team on the field for Sunday's big game over behind the back stretch barns. The team will line up as follows: Smith, catcher; Obert, center field; Garrett, first base; Piker, right field; Cusimano, second base; Snider, left field; Edwards, shortstop; Mann, catcher, and Hilley, pitcher. The battery of Mann and Hilley joined the club today. Hilley was set down for three days for something or another at the barrier, and Mann was suspended for five days for failing to salute the patrol judge on the back stretch. The stewards will not umpire the game. Trainer Boorse, suspended for stimulating, will call them. In fact, I thought for a while today that the stewards had suspended themselves. Between the fourth and fifth rates Janitor Joe was the only living soul in the judges' stand. He had a worried look on his face—but the stewards came back, from somewhere or another.

BILL.

First race—Loderous appears to have found the right spot in this sprint. This one has worked well and I see no reason for mistakes. Cherry Point is one that Trainer Joe uncovered here the other morning. Bless Her Heart is going to win on an off track.

Second race—Nehallac failed us last out and I'm going back. Has shown a lot of speed hereabouts. Jockey Wisner might be able to do something with Herself. Her last was awful. Baby Bosh, a recent winner, to take care of the others.

Third race—Three Grand won here for the Benningites at a good price last year. Breaks off the rail in this sprint and may surprise. Tuleyries-Wand looks like the one to beat. Justa Teacher would be dangerous if scratched into action.

Fourth race—Flageolet has proven something of a champion in this section. Deserves the chief pick in this field. Schley B and Bonnie Dhu to take care of the others.

Fifth race—Gloriione looked like she could run all day when she scored here on Thursday. If she can get that closing punch here it will be all over but the shouting. Worthington and Dona Dulcin represent the chief early speed but they may run each other into the ground.

Sixth race—This Play shifts riders tomorrow and Eddie Smith may be able to win with him. Gets in with only steadying weight. Royal Lassie and Irish Vote are the best of the others.

Seventh race—Miss Catalan finally awoke last out to run a good race. She has a field here that seems to suit. Apathy closed well in that recent effort and is dangerous along with Politen.

Trade Deadline Near, Red Sox Seek Foxx, Dodgers Want Dean

More Power Is Objective Of Clubs

$75,000 Reported Bid for Dizzy; A's Fail, Mack May Listen.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

NEW YORK, June 7.—With the deadline on major league trading only a few days away, several managers in both majors today were making last-minute efforts to swing deals to bolster their clubs with players capable of overhauling the fast-flying New York Yankees and Bill Terry's Giants.

The Dodgers and Red Sox, which have slipped into the second division the last few days after leading their respective leagues early in the season, were negotiating for two of the game's biggest stars.

The Dodgers want Dizzy Dean and the Red Sox covet Jimmy Foxx.

$75,000 Is Offered.

The strained relations existing between Dean and other members of the Cardinals, including Manager Frankie Frisch, may cause Sam Breadon, St. Louis owner, to part with his temperamental pitching ace. Brooklyn is said to have offered $75,000 cash for Dean, but this is just a feeler to determine if Dizzy is really for sale or trade.

Dizzy has stated that he has made definite overtures toward quitting the Cardinals, but on the return to the home grounds today he was a thoroughly chastened and apologetic young man.

"I've cooled off now," Dizzy said, "I'm sorry about the whole affair. I don't want to be sold or traded by the Cardinals."

Dean insisted that he was "picked on" when he retired to the Cardinal dugout after apparently "letting down" during Tuesday's game.

Willing to Forget.

"I was hot, steaming hot, I guess I didn't know what I was saying when I said we had a 'lousy' ball club. If I was wrong, so were the other fellows.

"I'm willing to forget it, unless the ooys continue to be sore at me and think they can't play behind me. If that's what it is then I'll tell Mr. Breadon to trade me."

Eddie Collins, business manager of the Red Sox, was reported to have offered $100,000 for Foxx and is willing to toss in First Baseman Babe Dalgren. Connie Mack has repeatedly said that Foxx is not for sale, but the dismal showing of the Athletics thus far may cause the veteran Philadelphia pilot to reconsider.

White Sox Nose Out Tigers; Gain on Yanks

Chicago, June 7 (AP).—The White Sox edged out Detroit, 9 to 8, in a free-hitting game today to retain second place and cut the Yankees' lead to two games. Zeke Bonura's tenth homer for the Sox, a pair of homers by Gerald Walker and one by Fox for Detroit led the clouting.

Let's Go Fishing . . .

By M. W. Meier.

BAY reports for the week-end are excellent. Point Lookout seems to be the best bet, with the waters around Poplar Island almost as good. Many weaks were caught at Lookout the last few days, as was a goodly number of croakers. Several boats are reported to have caught a few blues on both Southwest and Northwest Middles. One string was said to have been 19 fish, all over 5 pounds.

Capt. Noah Hazard, Galesville, says that croakers are plentiful, of fair size and readily biting.

Barring rain, you can safely "hit" river, bay, ocean or stream over Sunday and have some excellent sport.

Channel Bass Fishing.

We have had a number of calls recently from anglers anxious to get channel bass fishing, but who are unable to afford boat hire at the ocean beach ports.

Fox Hill Levels, 15 miles south from Ocean City, seems to be the only answer, and we are getting excellent reports as to surf fishing at this place. Fishermen are landing many big bass there now, as well as croakers, kings, sea bass, porgies and a few blues. Offshore, however, the blues are thick.

There is a little ferryboat at Fox Hills Levels which will land cars and anglers on the beach. It is operated by Alfred Peters. He charges $1 round trip for automobiles and 50 cents for each passenger.

Due to Be Jammed.

Many local anglers are now making this trip and the week-end doubtless will see the beach jammed. Take along plenty of 4-ounce sinkers and hooks suitable for kings, blue and big channel bass. You will need plenty of bait.

The bass being caught from the shore at this point are running large, with 62 pounds as the top so far reported. You need stout line and plenty of it to land a fish of this size in the surf.

Sharks and sting rays also are plentiful and may give you unexpected excitement. The rays are big fellows, running into several hundred pounds. They are "mean customers," as most anglers know. If you ever "beach" a sting ray, kill him and make sure no one monkeys with the tail.

Successful Excursion.

The fishing party which Louis Steinar, of Wolf & Co., staged Thursday was such a success that like parties will be held every Thursday until September 19, "Pop" Hess, 86, became the guest of the gang when he landed the largest croaker.

The group drove to Solomons Island and embarked with Capt. Lore. They crossed the bay and hit the waters around Tangier Island without luck and then returned to the western shore, where they landed more than 100 fair-sized croakers.

There were ten in the crowd: Dr. Sherfy, Capt. Esau, of the Marine Barracks; J. A. Brinkman, Walter and Ernest Hazel, Henry Miller, Bob Schenieck, "Pop" Hess, Emil Youpse and Mr. Dretchler.

Annual Fishing Contest.

If you catch a big fish between now and December 1, take it to the men's sport section of Hecht Co., and let them weigh and measure it. You may be eligible to one of the $20, $5 and $3 prizes Hecht's is offering.

The contest is for practically all species of trout, spiney-rayed and salt-water fish, caught in local or neighboring waters. Dr. M. D'Arcy Magee, president of the local Isaak Walton League Chapter, and Capt. D. N. Carpenter, U. S. N., are judges. A circular describing the prizes and classes is available on request.

River Lures Many.

Some excellent-sized rocks and cats are being taken every day out of the Potomac and the angler who can not make a long trip for his sport need go no farther than Chain Bridge.

Seven and eight pounders are commonplace now to the men using cut herring bait. Worms seem only to attract the smaller sized fish. The best time is early in the morning.

Scores of 1 and 2 pound black bass are being taken every day at Little Falls.

Reds Rout Bucs, 13-4; Derringer on Mound

Pittsburgh, June 7 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds swamped the Pittsburgh Pirates today under a 15-hit attack, including three homers, and won an easy 13-to-4 victory in a game that was called at the end of the seventh inning because of rain.

Paul Derringer, on the mound for the Reds, did not have to extend himself after his team mates rallied in the second inning to score five runs and drive big Jim Weaver from the mound.

Stock Market Reveals Buying For Investment

Most Gains in Dull Day Are Recorded by the Dividend Payers.

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 7.—Stocks pursued a quiet and uninspired amble during most of today's session, and even an upward flutter at the close left the list with nearly as many minus marks as pluses.

Many of the gains were chalked up in the dividend payers and the preferred group, again evidencing the steady buying of yields which has been going on for some time.

The continued piling up of funds seeking some type of employment was emphasized in the latest banking figures which showed member institutions' excess reserves for the latest week at a new high peak in the system's history, around $2,425,000,000.

Market forces put on their now habitual one-eye-on-Washington act, while trying to keep the other on Wall street and the business picture. They noted with particular interest the President's warning that voluntary codes had no license to violate the anti-trust laws, but a mere continuation of uncertainty, rather than any uneasiness, appeared to be their reaction to the dictum.

The late tilt in the market left the Associated Press average of 60 stocks up .3 of a point at 42.3, but the substantial scattering of losses along with the gains, and the low turnover of 589,780 shares, robbed the day of significance.

Buyers Lacking In Wheat Pit

Closing Prices Lowest for the Day; Corn Holds Steady.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 7.—Widening of harvest operations in Texas witnessed buyers backing away from the wheat market today, with consequent lower prices.

A continuous stream of selling orders in the wheat pit was induced by better weather conditions. Adding to the downward pressure on wheat was a late break of $1 a bale in the cotton market.

Wheat closed weak at the day's bottom level, ⅞@1½ under yesterday's finish, July, 82⅝@82¾; corn, ⅝ off to ⅞ up; July 82½@80¾; oats, ¼@½ down, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to 7 cents gain.

Some pit traders working for a recovery of wheat prices contended that indications pointed to probabilities of a late harvest for the country as a whole. Likelihood that the harvest would be delayed caused holders to switch from July to September contracts. The result at times was a decided tendency to narrow the September premium.

Buying of corn against sales of wheat gave the corn market a relatively firm tone.

Provisions averaged higher, owing chiefly to curtailment of Chicago stocks of lard.

President's Message Lifts Coast Stocks

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, June 7.—President Roosevelt's special message to Congress today recommending broad transportation legislation lifted rail stocks here at the close, three hours later than New York. Southern Pacific rose 50 cents to $17.37, and Atchison went to $42, 75 cents above the Wall Street finish. Other stocks were strong, notably utilities, with new highs on gains of $1 to $3 a share.

Cotton Plants Abolish Code, Later Recant

Spinners, After Ordering 50-Hour Week, Go Back to 40.

New York, June 7.—Robert C. Boger, president of Boger and Crawford, spinners and mercerizers operating mills in Philadelphia and in Lincolnton, N. C., has authorized the Cotton-Textile Institute to announce that the firm's mills will definitely return to code requirements next Monday.

"You can be assured that we will go back to the 40-hour schedule next Monday," said Mr. Boger, who, after the Supreme Court's decision invalidating NRA, became known, announced that beginning last Monday, the work week in the Lincolnton mill would be increased to 50 hours with a minimum wage of $16 a week.

Mr. Boger had subsequently offered to reconsider the revision although plans for the change had progressed so far that it was impossible for the firm to counteract them this week.

Today's action by Boger and Crawford left only one small mill among 1,500 formerly covered by the cotton textile code not adhering voluntarily to code standards.

Canvasses conducted by the institute's field staff continued to bring assurances from mills, large and small, that they are not contemplating any immediate changes in operating policies. In every instance reported mill executives express confidence that an industry-wide program to bridge the present critical situation can be evolved.

Flour Production Lower.

New York, June 7 (AP).—Production of flour in the principal milling centers in May totaled 4,975,434 barrels against 5,160,516 in the same month last year, General Mills, Inc., reports.

Bankers Consider Seriously Withdrawal From Federal Reserve if Title II of Banking Bill Should Pass; Fear Unlimited Control of Reserve Requirements.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, June 7—Consideration has been given by several large city banks to the feasibility and wisdom of withdrawing from the Federal Reserve System in the event that Title II of the pending banking bill should be enacted into law without major amendment. Such action would be taken to retain a reasonable degree of freedom for the managements of these institutions, so that they can continue to plan their future operations without fear of coersion by Government agencies.

Particular concern is expressed by several bankers concerning the practical effects of the provision of the banking bill which gives the Federal Reserve Board the authority to vary at will legal reserve requirements imposed upon member banks. The wording of this provision is so broad that some bankers have concluded that it may be used to compel banks to purchase Government bonds as well as to increase cash reserves.

The bill in its present form authorizes the Federal Reserve Board "by regulation to change the requirements as to reserves to be maintained against demand or time deposits or both by member banks."

Since this power over reserves does not specify that it applies only to raising or lowering percentage cash reserve requirements, the conclusion is reached that it would permit the declaration that other assets, such as Government securities or bankers' acceptances would be counted as legal reserve at the will of the board. This interpretation is strengthened by the fact that this paragraph of the law begins with the words, "Notwithstanding the other provisions of this section."

Creates Very Difficult Operating Problem.

Bankers are wondering how they can adapt their operating methods to such a system of completely flexible reserve requirements. A conservative bank official, especially at times when he does not possess large excess reserves, watches carefully the fluctuation of his reserve position, and seeks generally to avoid getting into debt for a protracted period at his Federal Reserve bank. Now if he felt that legal reserve requirements might be raised at any time by fiat of the Federal Reserve Board, he would normally prefer to have a margin of cash in excess of legal requirements, so that he would not have to go deeper into debt at the Federal Reserve Bank if the board should raise reserve requirements of New York City banks from 13 per cent of demand deposits to, let us say, 20 per cent of demand deposits. If the board should require additional reserves in the form of Government bonds, it might conceivably put pressure on banks to liquidate other assets and buy more Government securities, thus taking the function of management out of the hands of the directors and officials of the bank to a large extent.

Through its power to raise reserve requirements, the Federal Reserve Board would have the power of forcing member banks into debt at the Federal almost at will. At the same time it is pointed out that the Federal Reserve Banks do not have to discount for member banks. Hence, through a threat of withholding the free use of rediscount privileges at times when the banks need larger reserves because of a change in requirements, the Reserve Banks would obtain a far stronger hold over member banks operating policies than they have possessed until now. The dual threat of raising reserve requirements and withholding needed rediscount facilities, in fact, would make it necessary for a member bank to keep in very close touch with the management of its Reserve Bank and to be guided largely by the latter's advice.

Furthermore, changes in reserve requirements would effect all banks in a given group, rather than individual institutions. The law permits changes for banks in central reserve and reserve cities, for country banks, or for both groups. Hence, institutions that maintain excess reserves might be unaffected by a change in reserve requirements, while other banks would be forced to borrow heavily at the Federal because they did not have surplus balances at the time that a rise in reserves was ordered.

Advantage Seen In Leaving System.

By leaving the system and incorporating under State charter, banks would be subject only to the reserve requirements of the States in which they are chartered. It is held doubtful that the States would pass flexible reserve statutes. Hence, State non-member banks would gain exemption from the control over legal reserve requirements given the Reserve Board by the banking bill of 1935.

Needless to say, the large banks will consider the problem from every angle before taking such a decisive step. However, it is true that withdrawal from the system is being given more active consideration now than at any time since its inception, in some conservative institutions. It is being argued that as bank operations become less profitable and more subject to rigid Government regulation, the disadvantages that may result from withdrawing from the system grow less, and the reasons for doing so increase.

A number of State Banking Associations hold their meetings during the coming week, and this subject is expected to receive serious discussion, especially in private conversations among members.

Final Rally Aids Prices on Curb

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 7.—Minor price fluctuations were the rule in the Curb Exchange trading today. Scattered selling early in the period resulted in scattering declines, but buying in the final minutes converted some of these into small gains. Transfers approximated 157,000 shares, compared with 179,000 Thursday.

Mining shares were somewhat reactionary, Newmont and Bunker Hill & Sullivan both yielding more than a point. Fractional gains were recorded by American Cyanamid "B," Pioneer Gold, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Swift International, Electric Bond & Share and Creole Petroleum.

Steel Unchanged.

New York, June 7 (AP).—Steel prices unchanged.

Thomson's 146 Tops Field at Oakmont

Only Three Pros Shatter 150 in Rain; Krueger Is Runner-up.

played with the South African star, Sid Brews, picked up after he fired his shot from the seventeenth tee. Pity the Armour man. He went out in 48, 11 strokes over par, with an 8 on the par 4 third and a 7 on the par 5 fourth. He wasn't the Tommy Armour who won the open here eight years ago.

Only a shadow of his great self, the one-time Washington (D. C.) pro, played just as poorly on the back nine, where he failed to land a par for seven consecutive holes.

His decision to withdraw was shocking news to the golfing fraternity, for in some quarters he had been established as a favorite.

Wouldn't Have Broken 90.

Armour wouldn't have broken 90 had he finished his round, for through the sixteenth he was 18 strokes over par.

Wiffy Cox, a tough customer from Brooklyn, was among the failures with his 162. He took an 84 today. Leo Diegel, of Philadelphia, he of the unorthodox putting style, and Harold MacSpaden, of Kansas City, star of the winter tournaments, passed out of the picture with 163, and Jimmy Hines, the Garden City, N. Y., star, matched his 84 of the first day to kick himself right out of the battle.

The rest of the big shots qualified, but it is interesting to note that not one of the six invading Japanese players was able to crash through.

The home-town boy who hopes to make good, Sam Parks, was in a good position with his 77-73—150. Parks blazed over the first nine in 35, two under par, and carded five threes during the day, for a great round of shot-making.

But this old course was plenty tough today, and the rain didn't help the boys any. Only Ted Turner, pro at the Piney Valley Club in New Jersey, was able to crack par. Turner, 30 years old, shot with the accuracy of a marksman for a 71, one under par, with a 35, on the incoming nine. He had an 80 the first day, and jumped right back into the fight with his 151, being tied by Al Espinosa, the Akron Spaniard, with 75-76, and Denny Shute, the slim young Chicago pro, who hammered out a 73.

Hagen, Dutra, 153.

Five were locked in a tie with 152. They were Herman Barron, the Jewish pro from White Plains, N. Y., with 73—79; Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., with 73—79; Mortie Dutra, brother, of Olin Dutra, defending champion, with 75—77; Vincent Eldred, of Westview, Pa., with 75—77, and Ray Mangrum, the Los Angeles terror, with a brace of 75s.

Famous for his ability to defy the elements of the weather, Walter Hagen, the old Rochester kid, was in a class at 153 with Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J.; Defending Champion Olin Dutra; Dick Metz, of Chicago, and Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., national P. G. A. title holder.

Hagen gave the gallery a genuine thrill when he laid his spoon second to within 8 feet of the pin on the wet eighteenth green and trundled in his putt for a birdie 3 for a brilliant last nine of 34, 1 under par. The Haig with a 6 on the third and a 7 on the fourth, went out in 42, and the situation looked dark for him until he played the back nine in 2 under 4s—in rain and wind. Hagen carded a 77 the first day.

Cruickshank at 154.

The 154s included Bobby Cruickshank, of Richmond, who took 40 strokes coming home for a 76; Ralph Guldahl, of Texas; Jack Gordon, of New York, and Mackenzie.

Former Open Champion Johnny Goodman added a 78 to his 77 for a 155, the same figures posted by George Von Elm, of Los Angeles, who came back with a 74 today after his 81 of yesterday. Von Elm started with a remarkable eagle 3 on the first hole, and reeled off three 3s on the initial nine to go out in 35.

Two under par through the ninth, Johnny Revolta, of Wisconsin, whose jutting jaw is like the prow of a battleship, folded up under pressure on the back nine and finished with 75, for a 155 total. Cliff Spencer, Gene Kunes, of Jeffersonville, Pa.; Jim Foulis, of Chicago, and Al Watrous, of Detroit also had 155s.

MacDonald Smith was among the day's casualties. The Carnoustie Scot, who shot a grand 74 the first day, went haywire and took an 82 today, for 156. Johnny Farrell, 1928 Open champion, Willie MacFarlane, the Tuckahoe Scot, who had 41-40, with nine 5s and a 6 on his card, Craig Wood, the blonde bomber from New Jersey, a miserable 80 to his credit, and a flock of fives, finished with 156s.

83 for Ky Laffoon.

Sid Brews, the South African star; Henry Picard, the young Hershey, Pa., pro, and Ed Dudley, who carded an 83 today, were tied with 157, and Harry Cooper, of Chicago, out in 43, three 6s on the first nine, found himself out of the running with 158. Cooper took an 81, Ky Laffoon had an 83, for 158; Phil Perkins, 159; Johnny Golden, 160, and Billy Burke, around in 84, barely got in with his 161.

Thomson was blasting his wood shots and his irons over the bunkers with such deftness that tonight he appeared to be the man to beat for the Open title. Although two shots are a small margin with 36 holes to go, Thomson was looked upon as the sure thing to coast home, provided he maintains his present burning pace tomorrow.

Cumberland Golf Final Slated for Tomorrow

Cumberland, Md., June 7.—The 36-hole final for the men's spring golf championship between Charles S. (Bill) Catherman, jr., and James Beacham, will be played over the Cumberland Country Club course Sunday.

Mount St. Mary's Beats Loyola Nine

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Emmitsburg, Md., June 7.—Mount St. Mary's College defeated Loyola College, Baltimore, in the final game, 12 to 9. The Mountaineers got off to a lead of three runs in the first inning and added three more in the third, but were forced to call upon Bill Sullivan when Tavani and Rutan developed wildness. Loyola started a rally in the ninth frame but was stopped after three runs were scored.

between a par 4 and a par 5 hole. But the first hole here at 482 yards is a par 5, and the fifteenth at 475 yards is listed a par 4. On the back nine there are three par 4 holes that measure 461, 475 and 473. There is a par 3 hole on the first nine, 253 yards long, and the wind was dead on the nose this morning and I didn't see anybody getting home in one.

They don't cut the greens here. They lather them and shave them with a straight razor. They are so fine and fast that on certain down slopes, no matter how gentle the tap, the ball gains speed by its own weight and simply cannot be stopped. If the members of Oakmont had to play this course the way it is today, they would all wind up mental cases. And so don't blame the poor professional when he posts a 77 or a 78. He is shooting nice golf.

And don't worry about him either. Next year he will come up with a 70-ounce driver instead of the usual 13½, that will knock a ball 350 yards off the tee, then he will put out a ball with a timing device like shrapnel to exude molasses out of tiny holes to stop a ball on the greens which by them may be made of venetian glass or carorra marble.

Incidentally, Maj. Jones and Jay Munroe, two representatives from Baltusrol in Jersey, where the open will be played next year, have had a good look at this course and have promised that Baltusrol will play no harder than it does for its members or than it did for the qualifying rounds there recently.

But I began by talking about Butch the Red, alias Alvin Kreuger. By this time you know that he is a Swedish gentleman, and a semipro and minor league baseball pitcher. But what I didn't know was that he could also "yoomp" on skiis, and when he was 12 years old, yoomped 60 feet, broke his skiis, got another bigger pair, went on the big slide and yoomped twice as far.

He has a shock of pinkish hair that bunches over his forehead, and a nose pointed like an ice pick. His putting stroke is one of the most soothing motions you could wish to see, smooth and sweet and would calm a psychopathic. This tournament may be the strange freak and break of fate that may turn a small-time ball player into a first-rate, well-paid golf professional.

I still think my man Sarazen is going to win, but if Kreuger can finish even third or fourth it will mean a job for him. Keep your eye on Jimmy Thomson, who is hot this tournament. Sarazen broke his new trick putter yesterday slashing at a stone after missing an easy birdie. Was his display of Eyetalian temper punished? It was not. He went back to his old blade putter this morning and had six one-putt greens. But for a disastrous 7 when he was trapped on the ninth he would have come in three under. Well, tomorrow is Manias holiday, the last 36 holes.

ing hole; his drive landed in a bunker to the left. His second hit on the green but rolled off to the left. On the second, the Congressional pro belted a nice drive. He half-topped his second into a bunker, and it took him five, one over.

He parred the next two in 4-5, just missing a birdie on the fourth. His drive was bunkered on the fifth, his third was 25 feet past the pin, and he made a five, one over. He went one over with a four on the 187-yard sixth, being forced to play a spectacular recovery from heavy rough to the left of the green. After being bunkered with his second shot on the seventh, with a storm just about to break, Mackenzie holed a 10-footer for his par four. Traps cost him a five on the eight, two over, and a six on the ninth.

Finds Bunker Again.

The storm became fiercer as Mackenzie drove off the tenth. Again it was a bunker and he took a 5. His second on the eleventh was over the green, and it was a 5. Mackenzie chipped dead to save a par on the twelfth, and a bunker to the left of the green cost him a par on the short thirteenth.

The storm abated a bit and Mackenzie played the next five holes in perfect figures, 4, 4, 3, 4, 4, to come home in 38. He reached the 475-yard fifteenth with a drive and full spoon for his par.

Mackenzie didn't three-putt a green.

Spencer, however, three-putted the first hole for 6, but came right back with a corking good iron second that left him 3 feet from the pin of the second hole, where he made a birdie deuce.

Gets5 on Third.

A trapped second cost him a 5 on the third, and, although in the trap on the long fourth, he recovered for his par 5. Spencer went over the green with his tee shot on the eighth and took a 4, one over. He parred the ninth with a 5 and went out in 40.

On the tenth and eleventh the Beaver Dam pro missed 6-footers for pars. He three-putted the short thirteenth for a 5, and traps caused him to shoot a 5 on the fifteenth and a 5 on the short sixteenth.

He played carefully for his par 4s on the seventeenth and eighteenth.

Al Houghton hit a tremendously long second that carried over the green of the first hole, and he took a 6. He went over on the next four holes, three-putting the fourth and fifth. He three-putted the eighth, but pitched to within 3 feet of the cup on the long ninth for a birdie 4.

Houghton went over on the tenth, thirteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth. He missed a 4-footer for his par on the fifteenth, but finished 4-4.

Marynell Wins Fifth Of Season at Latonia

Latonia, Ky., June 7 (AP).—The Long Run Stable's consistent filly, Marynell, recent graduate of the selling plater ranks, accounted for her second handicap and fifth purse of the season when she annexed the Perryville Handicap, today's feature race.

Five contested over the 6-furlong route, with W. F. Knebelkamp's Lillian Uhl and M. J. Conley's My Blaze second and third, respectively. Marynell was cleverly handled by Jockey A. Fernandez. Rated in reserve off the early pace set by Lillian Uhl, the 4-year-old daughter of Billy Brush raced into command rapidly at the far turn and, continuing well, won as her rider pleased by three lengths.

Once Overs

By H. I. Phillips

Dr. Roosevelt Makes Another Visit.

Uncle Sam—Quick, nurse! Throw a blanket over my head and turn out the lights.

Nurse—What're you worried about now? Didn't the court just take all those medicines away?

Uncle Sam—Yes, but I hear the doctor's coming back. Here comes somebody now.

Dr. Roosevelt (entering, a little less cheerful than usual)—Hello, Sam. How do you feel?

Uncle Sam—What happened to me, anyhow?

Dr. Roosevelt—It was a question of diet.

Uncle Sam—Diet?

Dr. Roosevelt—Yes; it was a big mistake to let you have that chicken.

• • • •

Uncle Sam—Was that chicken I've been eating?

Dr. Roosevelt—Yes, and I guess we forgot to remove the feathers. Didn't it taste funny to you?

Uncle Sam—After living on eagle meat for two years nothing could taste funny, doctor.

• • • •

Dr. Roosevelt (getting down to business)—How's your head? Are you as dizzy as you were?

Uncle Sam—Dizzier. I didn't know where I was going, and now I don't even know where I am. Lissen, doc, slip me one of those Magic Remedy Pills, will ya?

Dr. Roosevelt—I can't; they're unconstitutional.

Uncle Sam (desperately)—But you got to; I've become an addict.

Dr. Roosevelt—Yes, but you're not an interstate addict.

Uncle Sam—Please . . . just one more NRA hypo.

Dr. Roosevelt—The court insists that you go back to the old-fashioned homeopathic remedies of the horse and buggy days.

Uncle Sam—Okay. Could I have a horse's neck?

Dr. Roosevelt—You'll get no more from me until I'm positive of my authority.

Uncle Sam—But I tell you I feel awfully funny.

Dr. Roosevelt—You feel funny! Say, how do you think I feel?

• • • •

Uncle Sam—What's all that noise?

Dr. Roosevelt—That's all the experts discussing what to do with you next. Aren't you nervous?

Uncle Sam (in terror)—Are you?

Dr. Roosevelt—Pull down that blanket.

Uncle Sam—Why?

Dr. Roosevelt—I'm getting in with you!

LENDING money to Government employes for financing personal or family needs is one of the major purposes of new credit unions organized or being organized in many departments by the Federal Credit Union Section, Farm Credit Administration.

BAKER.

Making loans to happy parents, financing the bar examinations of aspiring Government employes, lending money to move families, to buy furniture, clothes or insurance are some of the purposes for which employes are forming credit unions, according to Claude R. Orchard, director of the section.

New credit unions at the Department of Internal Revenue, Interior, Treasury, Justice, Compensation Commission, Public Health Service and Smithsonian Institution are the latest additions to the list of 38 in Government departments.

These unions are operating under either the Federal or District acts and include in their membership about 8,000 Government employes, according to official reports.

Ira Y. Bain, chief, Bureau of Appointments, Internal Revenue, reports that the recently-organized Internal Revenue Federal Credit Union has a membership of approximately 1,200 employes.
